Busy Red Cross Trucks
Do Animals Think?
Gloomy But True

By Arthur Brisbane

PARIS, JUNE 27—No man knows when he is safe; for, as the Germans say: "es kann kein mensch sein schichsaal entgehen," "no man can escape his destiny."

It is written in the Koran "that which God writes on thy forehead thou wilt come to."

The old Greek warned by the Augur that he would be killed by a house falling on him,. decided to prevent that by sleeping out of doors. As he slept an eagle flying overhead, dropped a turtle that crushed his skull. The turtle's shell was the house in this case.

Now Dr. Eckener, who has flown around the world, and flown across the ocean many times, narrowly escapes death in his automobile, plunging into a little ditch.

To cross, safely, oceans several miles deep in some places, and then be wrecked in a shallow ditch, is the height of something.

You have read blood curdling stories about Italian air men bombing innocent Red Cross equipment in Ethiopia. You might care to read the sequel as given by Dr. E. Ralph Hooper, of the American ambulance mission in Ethiopia. He told medical students at Leeds that Ras Desta Demtu, "commandeered a Red Cross truck and loaded it with ammunition. Before he had finished, he was surprised by an advance Italian force. The truck fell into the hands of the Italians."

After that, Italians, knowing that Red Cross trucks were being used to transport ammunition, decided to treat Red Cross trucks as ammunition wagons.

Are animals capable of any thought?

A dog on Prince Edward Island, whining and howling with its muzzle against a pile of clothing on the edge of a pool, attracted men who took from the water the bodies of two brothers, 15 and 17 years old. Could the dog have "thought out" a connection between the clothing and the disappearance of its young owners.

Might consciousness be the same in all living things, from microbes up to dinosaurs and down to men, the kind of brain through which the consciousness works making the difference?

If you gave a tom-tom to Paderewski he would have to play the tom-tom and could not play a Beethoven sonata, with all his talent.

The committee on morals and social welfare of the United Lutheran Synod, brought in a report that would almost make you move to Alaska.

"Crime and vice abound, with increase of murder, gambling, kidnaping, drunkenness and desecration of the Lord's Day people are pleasure and money mad.

"Many do not believe any more in a holy state ordained of God. The divorce evil is on the increase."

Many Lutherans reject the report as exaggerated, although there is no exaggeration about crime, murders, the gambling, all three thriving as never before in the history of any country.

Mohammedans, living in a warm climate, where they had no ice, and pork quickly became unfit to eat, are taught that they must not touch pig meat. The carcass of a hog was found in a Mohammedan mosque in Bengal recently. Indignant worshippers rushed out, attacked and robbed shops in the neighborhood.

You wonder why Mohammed should feel better about that pig in the mosque, because presumably innocent shopkeepers were robbed. Only a good Mohammedan could tell you why.

GRIM STRIKE RIOTS SWEEP FRANCE; 2 DIE

Blum Government in Peril From Fascist Coup; Reds Hoist Flags, Seize Plants

Paris, June 27 (US)—One worker was killed, another died of heart failure and three men were injured late tonight as violence broke out in the huge strike-paralyzed French naval works at Saint Nazaire where 10,000 strikers hoisted red flags over the shipyards.

While the danger of a Fascist coup such as Mussolini staged in Italy 14 years ago hovered over discordant France, fighting began among the strikers in Saint Nazaire when a worker stabbed two fellow strikers during an argument, fatally wounding one of them.

In the excitement another worker dropped dead and a striker, sitting atop a lofty shipyard wall watching the fracas, toppled to the ground, suffering serious injuries. The knife-wielding assailant was injured in the scuffle.

RACE TRACK STRIKE

The strike emergency assumed a more threatening aspect, meanwhile, as 30,000 additional workers laid down their tools in the Lorraine factory region.

The resurgent strike wave spread to France's world-famed Longchamp race track where pari-mutuel and other workers quit their duties, threatening cancellation of the nation's gayest and most aristocratic race classic, the Grand Prix, scheduled for tomorrow.

Paving the way for the threat of a sudden Fascist "counter-revolution", the position of Socialist Premier Leon Blum's government was rendered still more precarious when the national defenses suffered a blow with the hoisting of red flags by 10,000 strikers in the Saint Nazaire shipyards.

From Amiens came the disturbing report that workers had seized control of a munitions factory.

HUGE PLANTS SEIZED

Sudden cessation of work in the great factories of the highly-industrialized Lorraine region confronted the harrassed radical government of Blum with a new emergency. The workers swiftly halted production, accusing employers of failing to carry out the terms of a strike settlement reached several days ago.

The workers occupied many of France's largest plants, including the Wendel Iron and steel factories and coal mines.

Bordeaux was without street car service, while in Lille no newspapers were published due to a printers' strike. The Paris bread supply was menaced by demands for higher pay and improved working conditions presented by the bakers to their employers today. At Toulon gas and electrical workers suddenly went on strike for the second time, but the workers guaranteed to maintain service required for public safety.

At Vichy, where many Americans are taking the cure, employers capitulated to the demands of the workers in the baths and the strikers returned to their jobs.

Plane Falls In Lake; Girl And 3 Die

Burlington, Vt., June 27—Three men and a girl were drowned this afternoon when a Waco cabin airplane crashed in fog-bound Lake Champlain and immediately sank.

The plane was one of two score which had left Roosevelt Field, L. I., on the fifth anual good-will flight to Montreal, sponsored by the Montreal Light Aeroplane Club.

The dead:

SEARLING, MISS KATHERINE, 24, of Hollis, L. I.

Ten ships in the flight had landed at Burlington airport because of fog and poor flying conditions, but six had continued on for Montreal when Saglimbene's plane roared down through the fog.

In the murky atmosphere it was apparent the pilot had not known how close he was to land or water. He was seen to attempt to rise as he came out of the fog blanketing the area to within a few feet of the water.

Two other crashes also marred the flight.

..At Pittsfield, Mass., a cabin plane piloted by Henry J. Schiebel, Jr., overturned in a forced landing at the Pittsfield Riding and Polo Club. Schiebel, Arthur J. Dezzny and Irene and Mary Baudassai, all of New York, were treated at a hospital.

In Westport, N. Y., a midget plane, piloted by Richard Blythe, former press agent for Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, overturned. Blythe's nose was broken and his passenger, Philip Doorler of Glendale, L. I., was cut and bruised.

Thomas Meighan Seen Improved

Great Neck, N. Y., June 27 (INS)—Thomas Meighan, former motion picture star, was said to be much improved today at his home near here.

Meighan became seriously ill about two weeks ago and has been under treatment by two physicians.

Husing's Father Injured in Crash

Stamford, N. Y., June 27—Henry Husing, 66, father of Ted Husing, radio announcer, suffered two broken ribs today in an automobile crash at Prattville. He was removed tothe Columbia' Hotel, at Stamford, which he owns.

ELLIS CRIME CONFESSED, REPUDIATED

Youth, 19, "Clears" Noble in 1931 Slaying, but Wilts Under Questioning by Police

Haverhill, June 27—In repudiating his own "confession," made earlier today, to the murder of Mrs. Clara K. Ellis, Normand A. Archambault, 19, Boston law student, told police he had bared Russell Noble's own "inside story" of the 1931 slaying.

Russell Noble, who was only 17 and by reputation a model boy when he killed the wealthy widow, is serving a life sentence at state prison, the result of his plea of guilty to second degree murder.

Young Archambault walked into police headquarters today and "confessed," but later retracted under grilling.

He declared, however, the Boston Sunday Advertiser learned, that his object was to publicize young Noble's story to help the imprisoned youth toward a parole.

In this statement Archambault asserts Noble went frequently to Mrs. Ellis' mansion on her invitation, and that she had a hammer in the room so that a burglary could be simulated in case anybody surprised them.

State Detective Richard Griffin, who obtained Noble's confession shortly after the murder in 1931, and who helped break Archambault down today, called the Boston boy's "confession" a "shame," because it contained "serious reflections on the dead woman."

The police are satisfied that the case was completely solved with Noble's arrest and confession to entering the widow's house to steal and killing her when she switched on her bedroom light and recognized him.

INTERESTED IN CASE

With Griffin in the questioning which caused Archambault's retraction, and resulted in his release, was City Marshal A. Nicholas Altieri of this city. They turned the boy, a well-dressed lad, well-poised and a good talker, over to his mother and sister, with whom he returned to his home on Fenwood road, Roxbury.

Archambault formerly lived in Haverhill

Curley Boom for President in 1940 Is Started

WALSH GOES

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Philadelphia, Pa., June 27—Halted at the insistent request of Governor Curley, the "Curley for Vice-President" boom today turned into a movement boosting him for president in 1940.

Western delegates turned from their fixed purpose of throwing the governor's name into convention here with reluctance. Importunities of Chairman James A. Farley and other campaign managers to leave the field clear for Vice-President John N. Garner had been without effect until Governor Curley personally declared his unavailability.

Dr. Jay Schaffer, chairman of the Utah delegation, was to have placed the Governor's name in nomination.

"I would have nominated the Governor," he said today prior to the last session of the convention. "I believe that through experience and ability, Governor Curley had first claim on the nomination if there was any possibility for a change."

WATCH EARLE BOOM

Schaffer and many other delegates favorable to Governor Curley had been watching a cleverly prepared build up in the convention for Governor Earle, a former Republican, of Pennsylvania. Had the Earle boom got into gear, they would not have been caught napping.

"I believe that Governor Curley now is the logical man for President in 1940," Dr. Schaffer declared. "I'm going to do some campaigning this fall for the Democratic ticket with the young Democrats and I believe the young Democrats will be strong for the Massachusetts Governor four years hence. I expect to speak in Boston before the campaign is over."

Hope Hampton Sails in Tears

New York, June 27—Hope Hampton, operatic singer and former movie actress, sailed away to Europe today in tears.

Coast Guard Hunts Lost Wilkins' Ship

New York, June 27 (INS)—Fears expressed by Lady Wilkins for the safety of her husband, Sir Hubert Wilkins, today caused the Coast Guard to ask all vessels at sea to keep a close watch for the ship Wyatt Earp, on which the explorer is en route to Norway.

Sir Hubert and a crew of 10, including a wireless operator, left New York, June 17, after arranging to communicate daily with his wife by wireless. There has been no radio message since.

Haigis to Name Committee Head

John W. Haigis of Greenfield, the Republican pre-primary convention's nominee for Governor, will notify the party's state committee tomorrow of his choice for chairman of the committee.

In making this announcement last night, Haigis said that several men had been suggested to him, including the incumbent, Vernon Marr, and that he had utmost confidence in each of them.

Personal Government At Philadelphia

IN its personnel, procedure and platform, the convention at Philadelphia was one long parade of the power of personal government—kind of government Mr. Roosevelt has established in Washington in one term and will perpetuate if he is re-elected for a second term.

The convention was made up of delegates and alternates, so-called, sixty per cent of whom were office-holders and party officials wholly dependent upon Mr. Roosevelt for the jobs they now hold and for their chance of keeping them for four years more.

The procedure of the convention was dictated at every step by Mr. Roosevelt acting through his political man Friday—Jobmaster General Farley.

Mr. Farley was aided in running the convention by nearly all the members of the Roosevelt cabinet and by the largest mobilization of ambassadors and ministers ever summoned from their public posts of duty to serve as political bell hops on the floor of a national convention.

THE platform was dictated in its every plank by Mr. Roosevelt himself and reflects from first to last his attempt to be all things to all men.

The words of the platform are the most emphatic he could find, but they have been thrown together to piece out weasel phrases, the meaning of which he will interpret as best suits his devious purposes.

Mr. Roosevelt apparently believes that having deceived the American people in the platform of 1932, it will be all the easier to deceive them again in the platform of 1936.

Two planks from this conglomeration of weasel phrases will suffice to prove this.

Upon the subject of the merit system, which he and his Jobmaster general have done their best to destroy, Mr. Roosevelt comes up smiling with the following new pledge:

"We pledge the immediate extension of the merit system through the classified civil service to all non-policy making positions in the federal service."

What does this mean? Ask Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Farley. Given four years more of despotic power THEY will say what positions THEY consider non-policy making.

UNDER the deceitful making of this pretended pledge the spoils system can be extended by Mr. Roosevelt to any part of the federal service and the positions still protected by civil service regulations can, with the assistance of a craven Congress, be restored to the pie counter upon the excuse that they are no longer "non-policy' making" positions.

Of the same deceitful sort are the so-called pledges in regard to foreign policy. They read in part as follows:

"In our relationship with other nations this government will continue to extend the policy of the GOOD NEIGHBOR . . . we shall continue to observe A TRUE NEUTRALITY in the disputes of others; to work for peace and to take the profits out of war; to guard against being drawn, by political commitments, international banking or private trading, into any war which may develop anywhere."

The honest American, seeking to find the true meaning of these pious platitudes, must turn to personal government in the White House. Only Mr. Roosevelt can interpret these commitments, and doubtless he could not tell you today how he might interpret them on some difficult tomorrow.

Mr. Roosevelt did not observe a "true neutrality" in the Old War dispute over Ethiopia, therefore, to repeat in the future the floundering

President Denounces 'Slavery' Under 'Royalists'

ISSUE DRAWN

Roosevelt Speech In Full On Page 8

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

Franklin Field, Philadelphia, June 27 (US)—With the militant warning that he will push forward the New Deal's "war" on "industrial dictatorship," President Roosevelt tonight formally accepted his renomination before a thunderously cheering crowd of 120,000 persons.

Speaking in the gigantic outdoor stadium that was packed to overflowing, the President sounded the battle cry of his campaign for re-election in a series of oratorical shafts aimed at his critics in the business world whom he accused of fostering "economic slavery."

The speech was listened to over the radio by millions and concluded at 10:31 p. m. (EDT) with what was easily one of the greatest ovations in American political history—and certainly the greatest of Roosevelt's career.

GARNER "IN RANKS"

At the same colorful notification ceremony, Vice-President John N. Garner, accepting his renomination as Roosevelt's running mate, pledged anew his allegiance to the President and the New Deal. He declared himself modestly a "soldier whose duty it is to follow where the commander leads."

President Roosevelt, in the brief span of less than half an hour, delivered a broad outline of the campaign he will wage in defiance of what he termed "the economic royalists who hide behind the American flag and Constitution."

SILENT ON LANDON

Not once in his address did he mention his Republican opponent, Governor Landon of Kansas. Neither did he mention former Governor Al Smith of New York or the latter's spectacular "walkout" on the Democratic convention.

Sounding the slogan with which he will defend the New Deal, the President exclaimed:

"It is not alone a war against war and destitution and economic demoralization.

"It is a war for survival of democracy."

In a fiery attack on the industrial leaders who have criticized

Platform Dooms Farmers to Serfdom, Ex-Senator Reed Warns Democrats

FEARS NRA 'MONSTROSITY' ONCE AGAIN WILL BOB UP

Copyright, 1936, Universal Service

Kansas City, June 27—Former Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, Democratic critic of the New Deal who, with Al Smith, urged nomination of a "genuine Democrat" instead of President Roosevelt, today deplored the platform adopted by the party.

He declared it calls for "regimentation" and "serfdom" for the farmer, reincarnation of the NRA "monstrosity" and change in the Supreme Court's constitutional authority.

Reed said:

"The platform taken together with the keynote speeches of the convention make three things perfectly plain. Namely that the policies heretofore insisted upon by Roosevelt are to be carried out if the Democratic party succeeds at the election.

"These policies are:

"1—The regimentation, that is, the control of and dictation to the farmers of the United States what they shall plant and harvest; what they shall sow and reap; what kind of live stock they shall raise, and when and how they shall market their product.

"These policies necessarily carry with them the fixation of prices to the farmer and producer and the fixation of prices to the consuming public. In other words no matter how disguised by soft phrases or by doubtful terms, the farmer is to be reduced to a condition bordering upon serfdom.

"The pill may be sugar-coated with the assurance that vast sums of money will be distributed to the farmers, but in the end those moneys must be collected from the people, and in the finality the farmers will be compelled to bear a large part of the burden. Disaster to the country is inevitable.

"2—No reasonable observer can doubt that a part of the plan proposed to be carried out is the reincarnation of the NRA. Although that curse was once visited upon our country and millions of people directly suffered thereby and the whole business of the nation was to a large extent paralyzed, nevertheless multitudes of persons well-informed about ordinary matters have never grasped the full enormity of the NRA.

"They do not understand that under that iniquitous scheme the representatives of business organizations and various crafts were each authorized to assemble and to adopt rules and regulations for the conduct of the business of all persons or companies engaged in that particular craft or business including the right to fix wages, hours of labor and prices of commodities; that regardless of a protesting minority these regulations could be adopted by a majority vote. It was then provided that these regulations should be promulgated by the President and whosoever should violate them would be liable to heavy penalties of both fines and imprisonment.

"Analyzed therefor, the people were to be subjected to fines and imprisonment for not obeying a regulation or rule adopted by a group of men representing or claiming to represent a certain craft line of business or policy who, meeting in secret in a back room, concocted among themselves regulations controlling the conduct, business, avocations and lives of millions of human beings.

"Tens of thousands of men and women were frightened into compliance because they could not afford to take the risk and incur the expense of trial in order to vindicate their rights under the Constitution of the United States.

"In order to permit these practices which were contrary to our entire scheme of government, the anti-trust laws were enacted to prevent combinations to fix prices were for the time being annulled.

"It is now perfectly clear that it is intended to again set up this monstrosity which in many respects was worse than the villanous oppressions of Russian Bolshevism or Hitlerism.

"3—It is now clear that it is proposed to drive forward and if the Supreme Court stands in the way to either if possible deprive that court of jurisdiction to pass upon the constitutionality of acts of Congress or to pack the Supreme Court by addition of other judges or in the case of the unfortunate death or disability of any of the present judges to appoint as their successors the tools of the President who adhere to his policies now and will carry them into effect if placed upon the bench."

Various Nations, Pastor's Topic

A description of the various countries in which Christians should be interested will be the substance of Pastor Harold W. Arthur's address this evening in the Union Square Baptist Church, Somerville.

LANDON FAVORS NEW WELFARE AID IN KANSAS

State Gets Sweeping Powers Under Amendment; Governor Works on Speech

Estes Park, Col., June 27 (US)—Governor Alfred M. Landon today described as "satisfactory" a proposed amendment to the Kansas constitution, giving broad power for the state to provide far-reaching legislation for social welfare.

The Legislature will convene July 7 to initiate the Amendment which will be voted upon by the people in the November elections.

The Governor revealed at a press conference here that he had virtually completed drafting a message he will deliver to the Legislature.

Through the Constitutional Amendment, which has the complete endorsement of the Governor, the state Legislature, will be able to nac measures for state cooperation with the federal government at any time in the future, he pointed out.

Many forms of relief for the needy and aged already have been instituted in the state.

While the Republican Presidential nominee has made vacationing the major purpose of his stay at the Mcgaw ranch, five miles from Estes Park, in a bowl of towering snow-capped mountains, he let it be known he was also working on his speech formally accepting the Presidential nomination at Topeka on July 23.

course he followed in that dispute would not be "to observe true neutrality."

WHO but Mr. Roosevelt could say whether "to guard against being drawn, by political commitments . . . into any war which may develop anywhere" means that he will again attempt to plunge the United States into the League of Nations through the front door of the covenant or the trap door of the league court protocol.

As a candidate for vice president in 1920 Mr. Roosevelt advocated American membership in the League upon the excuse that it would involve no political commitments.

As president, Mr. Roosevelt did his best, in 1935, to force the United States into membership in the League court upon the same excuse that it would involve no political commitments.

Now he asks for re-election as president upon a platform of his own dictation in which he REFUSES TO TELL THE AMERICAN PEOPLE whether he favors American membership in the League or the League Court or in some other league or league court of his own making.

It has been truly said that "as we look back over our country's history we find that it was those men who told the people the whole truth—or what at least they themselves honestly believed to be the whole truth—who most often succeeded in carrying their proposals through."

These leaders told the people the whole truth because they trusted the people and believed that in vital matters, which touched the very life and soul of the nation, "all artifice is out of place."

It well fits the re-election candidate for the presidency by whom and for whom its weasel phrases were flung together because its artifice reflects Franklin D. Roosevelt himself.

Its appeal will be confined to the job-holders and other followers of personal government who share Mr. Roosevelt's mistaken notion that Abraham Lincoln did not know what he was talking about when he said—

"You cannot fool all of the people all of the time."

Boys Use Human Skull as Football

Brockton, June 27—The mystery of a human skull, found on Haverhill street today, took an unexpected turn tonight when police learned that boys had used the skull as a football.

The skull was found by Cowin Haglund, 12, of Walnut street, in a heap of debris which city workmen had removed from a sewer catch-basin.

While Medical Examiner A. F. Budreski and police homicide squad members were examining the gruesome object and checking lists of missing persons, Julius Ross, 15, of Haverhill street, walked in and said he and several other boys originally found the skull last week in the rear of a West Elm street office building.

"We played football with it and it broke in half, so we threw it in the sewer," said young Ross.

According to police, the car was opertaed by Frederick Sokolski, 24, of Carney street, Charlestown. He was charged with operating a car without a license.

SEES EVENTUAL HOLLYWOOD SUCCESS

By ANN MARSTERS

Hollywood, Cal., June 27—This is not the "success story" of a local girl. It is quite the reverse.

It is the story of Frances Grant, who a few months ago was on her way to stardom. Now she's clerking in a Hollywood drugstore.

FRANCES GRANT, who was Stella Theophane Fortier in Somerville, waits Hollywood's call to stardom as she clerks behind drug counter, feeling success in films will be hers

Frances was born Stella Theophane Fortier 23 years ago in Roxbury. She was brought up and went to school in Somerville, living at 27 Autumn street, where her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred H. Fortier still have their home.

Recently her friends found her behind the counter of a drugstore dressed in black with immaculate white collar and cuffs.

No Self-Pity

She is very pretty, very sweet, with no evidence of self-pity behind her smile.

"You read so much about stars who have reached the top," she said, "and so little about the long dark days they spent on the way up.

"Perhaps stars prefer to forget they ever had to fight for attention. Perhaps they feel it sounds more glamorous to have the public think they sprang out of nowhere into fame and fortune.

"Personally I am not interested in cultivating an aura of glamor around myself, so I can tell the truth. I am having my troubles and struggles and I'm not ashamed of it."

She shrugged her slim shoulders and half smiled.

"Besides—," she said, "the much publicized Hollywood glamour is a myth of press agentry. Hollywood is a practical place of business—an industry of commercialized art. It carries a challenge with it. It gives you a heady satisfaction to fight it out here.

"But let me warn any girl, this is no place for inexperience or beauty alone. You can work in a drug store in your home town, and have someone around the corner who will help you when you need it. Misery doesn't need to look for company in Hollywood."

Her History

She told me, briefly, her own history

"When I was still going to Somerville High school," she said, "I did quite a lot of dancing at hotels and social affairs around Boston. And when I was 18, I went to New York and became a featured dancer in several Broadway musical shows.

"One was the Ziegfeld 'Follies,' and I was so thrilled when it played in Boston. I was co-featured with Hal LeRoy."

Meanwhile, Hollywood was coming nearer and nearer. It was reaching out its arm and beckoning to little "Theo Phane."

"I called myself Theo Phane on the stage," she said, "but I decided later that it sounded too much like cellophane." She laughed and her blue eyes sparkled. It was difficult to believe, from looking at her child-like face, that Frances Grant has a care in the world.

"Anyway," she went on, "the Fox Film company was going to produce George White's 'Scandals'. They wanted a specialty dancer, and they were considering two girls—Eleanor Powell and myself.

"We made our screen tests together, and a few days later we learned that the Fox officials had decided to sign us both."

Not in Scandals

When Frances got to Hollywood, she discovered that she was not going to be in the "Scandals." Much better than that—she was cast as the ingenue leading lady in Will Roger's picture, "Doubting Thomas." And critics far and wide who saw that picture, predicted great things for the future of the lovely "new comer."

But then came the heartbreaking blow. She was given no more chances to prove herself. After six months she was notified by the Fox studio that she had been "dropped."

She said:

"In true Hollywood style I was simply notified by letter that my option would not be taken up. No explanation. To this day I do not know why I failed."

She became, then, a "free lance" leading lady and starred in several independent productions.

"I have been in Hollywood less than a year and a half," she said, "and have played six leading roles. Still I have to work in a drug store to keep alive.

"The simple answer to the whole thing is that Hollywood is no place for a girl without a contract with a major studio.

"Free lance leading ladies are paid pitifully small fees for their work. They need it so badly. The independent producer knows this and takes advantage of it.

"A little while ago the most important independent producing company in Hollywood heard I was working in a drug store for $18 a week. They sent a representative to see me and offered me $25 a week to play leading roles in their pictures.

"I preferred to stay in the drug store."

So there you have it. It is the story, not of Frances Grant alone, but of hundreds of young girls who come to Hollywood bubbling over with ambition and hope, only to learn that they must put away their dreams.

But this is not the end of Frances Grant's story. She has not tucked her dreams into a secret corner of her heart. Of course she could very easily "wave the white feather" and take the next train for home.

"But I won't do that," she said. "I know I can make good here—and the hard knocks have just taught me to keep my chin up. The right chance will come—I know it will—and I shall not fail again.

"I like Hollywood and I'm going to make it like me."

For which we give three cheers for Frances Grant.

BEANO Racketeering PROBED

NORTON FLAYS MAYOR STAND

While Mayor Mansfield was silent on charges made by City Councillor Clement A. Norton that racketeers were cleaning up thousands of dollars on beano games, federal agents were completing a secret investigation of several local games yesterday.

The game under investigation by federal authorities, the Sunday Advertiser learned, are those which notorious racketeers are alleged to be operating through "front" men under the guise of charity.

Aroused by Councillor Norton's charge that he was "kidding the public again" and "attempting to retain a monopoly to protect those now engaged in running beano games," Mayor Mansfield yesterday requested Dist.-Atty. William J. Foley to investigate his charges.

Asks Quiz

The mayor asked Foley to summon Norton before him for the purpose of obtaining whatever information the Hyde Park councillor has regarding the games here.

Norton's first blast against the mayor followed Mansfield's statement last Wednesday in which he asserted the beano craze was getting out of hand and that he could not curb it alone.

"Your office issues the licenses, hence the public can do nothing," Norton said in a letter to the mayor.

"Three places in the very heart of the city net for themselves $10,000 a day.

"One former racketeer conducts 30 games a week and makes $1500 a day for himself. You will bankrupt the largest stores in Boston if you don't stop this racket at once."

Not Trying

Norton charged the mayor was not trying to combat the beano racket, recalling that a year ago the mayor said there were only three games in daily operation while he publicly admitted last Wednesday there were 60 games in progress daily.

Since the mayor's office licenses all beano games in the city, Norton said, the admissions of the mayor were strange, coming from a man who had pledged to drive the racket games from the city.

Ponzi Loves Wife but Won't Oppose Divorce

"Decree Is Better Than Suicide"

BEGGED ROSE TO JOIN HIM IN ROME

Though Charles Ponzi is still deeply in love with his attractive, dark-eyed wife, Rose, he will not contest the divorce suit she filed Friday in Middlesex Probate Court.

"I love her as deeply and dearly as a man can love a woman," the deported frenzied financier said yesterday in Rome, where he is writing his autobiography.

"I am precluded by law from returning to the United States, and unable in the present circumstances to afford Rose the ordinary comforts, security, companionship and degree of happiness to which she is entitled.

Hoped in Vain

"I realized something had to be done though I hated to think about it.

"Since divorce is the only solution, it will have to be. It is better than a suicide pact."

Friends of the deported man said the divorce had loomed ever since Ponzi lost his plea to remain in the United States.

To the last minute before he sailed, it was learned, Ponzi hoped his wife would accompany him.

But Mrs. Ponzi had carved out a business career of her own during the 11 years and nine months that her husband was behind bars, and, it is understood, did not feel like exchanging it for a life abroad.

Now she is prepared to write the last chapter in a romance that did much to create sympathy for Ponzi during the dark days when investors, duped to the tune of $9,000,000 clamored for revenge.

Prison Is Nemesis

Friends do not believe Ponzi is as resigned as he sounds, but they are confident he will let matters take their course.

For one thing he is pictured as feeling that his wife won his consideration by her faithful devotion to his interests during his imprisonment.

For another, it is pointed out, there is little he can do in view of the ground on which Mrs. Ponzi has sued—that he has served more than five years in state prison for a felony.

Under Massachusetts law, proof of such an allegation makes the granting of a decree mandatory.

MRS. ROSE PONZI, loyal wife of Charles Ponzi, author of "$9,000,000 bubble," finds her love has reached its end and has sued for divorce. Ponzi, from Rome, where he was deported, says he's still mad about her, but won't contest the action.

FIEND Rips Boy to DEATH

CUTS TONGUE, GOUGES EYES

Tawas City, Mich., June 27 (US)—His tongue cut out, his ears ripped off and his throat cut, the fiendishly mutilated body of 10-year-old Robert Kenyon of Detroit was found near here late today in bushes along the banks of an isolated stream.

Apparently slain by a madman, police said the child victim was identified by an uncle, George Thomas, with whom he had been living for the past few months at a farm home a half mile from where the body was found.

Throat Slashed

Missing since last Monday afternoon, the child, his head hacked and mutilated was discovered by a fisherman, Harry Young of Flint, Mich., who reported his find to state police.

The boy's throat had been slashed ruthlessly from one ear to the other, police said. Both ears had been sawed or hacked from the head, the tongue had been cut off and the skin of the child's cheeks was ripped and torn, police said.

Two Children Shot by Mistake

Mount Kisco, N. Y., June 27 (INS)—Shot by a poacher who said he had mistaken them in the dim light for woodchucks, two children were in a hospital today, one in a critical condition, from shotgun wounds.

George Tanassi, 13, may die, but his sister, Ruth, 8, was expected to recover, the shooting occurred on the Byram Lake golf course, where their father is caretaker.

Giovacchimio Curchiella, 61, Chappaqua, was held after police said he admitted firing the shots.

Funeral Held For El Veteran

Funeral services for Michael J. Sullivan, 64, one of the oldest employes of the Boston Elevated Railway, who has been connected with the road for 36 years as conductor and operator, took place yesterday from his late home, 20 Winter street, Arlington.

Requiem mass was celebrated in St. Agnes' Church, that town. Sullivan was a member of the North Cambridge Division, A. O. H., and the Boston Elevated Railway Carmen's Union, and both organizations had delegations at the funeral.

Bandits Abduct B. & M. Trainman

Fairlee, Vt., June 27—A train wreck on the Boston & Maine railroad was narrowly averted today when two gunmen marched away with a freight train conductor who had gone back from his disabled train to give warning to a following one.

ADVERTISING SEEN AS AID TO NORMALCY

Federation Members Here Cite Publicity as Warrior Against Depression Is Shown

The part advertising has played in national recovery was emphasized yesterday by prominent men in the advertising profession arriving at Hotel Statler to register for the annual convention of the Advertising Federation of America.

Edgar Kobak, chairman of the board, Advertising Federation of America and vice-president of Lord and Thomas, New York City, declared:

"The progress the American business man has made during the last several years against the depression forces is without doubt to a large extent related to his advertising philosophy.

"At no time in history has advertising had such a vital relation to the national economy. Workers, unemployed for years, are working again because of the impetus national advertising has given to America."

From men prominent in local advertising circles came similar opinions.

"It is advertising that has got and is still getting behind many national movements pertaining to recovery," declared Cecil Burnsley, advertising manager of Kennedy's.

"We must not forget that advertising has done a great deal to frustrate much of the prevailing hysteria during the height of the depression. There is no doubt that advertising is speeding up recovery."

Herbert Calridge, advertising manager of Salada Tea Company, told the Sunday Advertiser:

"Throughout the depression advertising has been necessary more than ever. It has been the reason for the steady increase in our business during the past three years."

Frank A. Black, chairman, National Silver Jubilee committee, and for 22 years affiliated with the publicity department of Filene's, said:

"There has never been the slightest doubt in my mind that retail store advertising is closely related to business volume.

"There will never be too much retails advertising in newspapers. This kind of advertising is helpful to both the retail stores and the consumer."

MESSAGE FROM ROOSEVELT

A message from President Roosevelt will be read at the general sessions luncheon tomorrow. A feature of the luncheon will be the award of prizes to winners of a national essay contest sponsored by Advertising Age.

David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America, who was originally scheduled to speak on Wednesday, will speak tomorrow instead.

"Truth in Advertising" was a movement undertaken by advertising men and newspaper publishers in the interests of the general public.

The movement was greeted by the public with enthusiasm, particularly because of the protection it gave the public against frauds became an integral part of the nation's advertising life.

In the 25 years that truth has been the corner stone of advertising hundreds of thousands of buyers have been saved from swindles through the exposures of the Better Business Bureaus now located in practically every large city in the country.

S. C. DOBBS

MERLE SIDENER

The movement was based on the principal that honest advertisers have but to tell the truth to win confidence and respect of the purchasing public.

Codes were drawn up at various times which sought to eliminate everything that might even border on the unethical.

The value of the movement was not only generally appreciated throughout the United States, but in Europe as well.

In fact, it can be truly said that American advertising men paved the way for the entire world in the matter of honest representation of goods or services offered for sale.

Newspapers have played an important part in the development of the movement, and by making truth in advertising a requisite for publication, gave the movement an impetus that made it successful.

G. A. ENGLAND DEAD IN N. H.

Concord, N. H., June 27—George Allen England, author, adventurer and scholar, died today at the New Hampshire State Hospital here. He was 58 years old.

In his will, England directed that his funeral be strictly private, with "no minister, no flowers, no music and no friends." He wished his body to be cremated and the ashes scattered.

Mrs. England and a daughter survive him.

George Allen England, son of a U. S. army chaplain, was born at Fort McPherson, Neb., Feb. 9, 1877. He was a Harvard graduate with the degrees of A. B. and A. M.

His writings included more than a score of novels as well as innumerable short stories, magazine articles and poems.

Adventure subjects and themes with fanciful and imaginative settings in the future were his favorites, although he wrote many travel books and published exhaustive and authoritative works on Icelandic and New England dialects.

His last personal adventure trip was to the interior of Mexico on a treasure hunt which proved a failure and left him stranded on the beach with a capital of 30 cents.

WIFE FEARS BANK CAR DRIVER SLAIN

Pawtucket, June 27—Frantic at her husband's disappearance from the armored payroll car he was driving, Mrs. Walter W. Hussey, 26, of Norwood, today predicted that police would find he had been kidnaped or murdered.

She was indignant at the issuance of a larceny warrant, charging the missing man with the theft of $2284 from the payroll car.

"He hasn't stolen anything," she declared. "I am sure he will come back the moment he is free to do so—if he is alive. He would never leave me or our three children. As for doing a dishonest thing, I know that is impossible."

Police received an anonymous phone call yesterday that Hussey had been seen running across the Division street bridge yesterday, shortly after he vanished with the armored car. They were unable to trace it.

PART TIME DRIVER

Hussey was a part time driver for the International Detective Service Co., operators of the truck. He worked for the company weekends, officers said, and was employed as Works Progress Administration painter four other days a week.

Investigating officers are puzzled by the fact that more than $13,000 was still in the car when it was found blocks away from the Rhode Island Hospital Trust Co., where it was last seen by the messenger who accompanied Hussey.

The messenger had left the car for a few moments to deliver a payroll.

CLOTHES IN CAR

Also in the abandoned machine were Hussey's shoes and uniform, and a revolver, the ownership of which has not been established. His own revolver was missing.

Hussey's children, Walter, Jr., 4; Ruth, 3, and Joan, 2, chatted outside their home with police officers, who are on guard there in event the missing driver returns.

WANTS HER SHOES

Only Ruth evinced concern at her father's absence. Exhibiting a scuffed pair of shoes, she said:

"My daddy said he was going to bring me some new shoes. When is he coming?"

Police found that the missing man had money due yesterday from a Warwick barber for whom he had done some painting. He did not collect it.

YD BLASTS ANTI-DEFENSE DOCTRINE IN U. S. COLLEGES

Worcester, June 27—A resolution, condemning all anti-American propaganda in educational institutions throughout the country, was unanimously adopted today, at the 17th annual convention of the Yankee Division Veterans association here.

In a previous resolution, the names of Harvard, Princeton, and Columbia had been cited as colleges where such propaganda had been spread among undergraduates.

As finally presented to the convention the association went on record, in this resolution, as being opposed to all propaganda directed against national defense.

The resolution followed the most impressive military parade in this city's history, in which more than 10,000 veterans marched in streets lined with 50,000 cheering spectators.

At Tech Field, where the veterans gathered at the conclusion of the parade, ceremonies took place marking the posthumous presentation of the Congressional Distinguished Service Medal to Major General Clarence R. Edwards, beloved commander of the division.

RAP 'FUTURE WAR VETS'

Delegates, at the business session of the convention, passed resolutions placing the division squarely on record as against all anti-American organizations.

One resolution specifically condemned the Black Legion.

Another condemned the "Veterans of Future Wars," and similar organizations in colleges, aimed against national defense.

A third resolution protested against "seditious or disloyal teachings in any private or public American school, any primary, secondary, or collegiate educational institution."

ELECT HERMAN LEADER

The veterans, in another resolution, requested the government to name a battleship the "U. S. S. Veteran," in tribute to all who had served in the World War.

Albert W. Herman of East Norwalk, Conn., was elected new national president of the association. The newly-elected national chaplain is Rev. Osias Boucher of Fall River. A. Raymond Doucette of Lynn was among the vice-presidents elected.

Raymond B. Kincaid of New Britain, Conn., was elected national historian, Past National President C. Bird Keach of Providence, R. I., was elected national judge advocate; Royal K. Hayes of Lowell, national Americanization officer; Ernest C. Parent, of Worcester, national service officer.

The following were elected national executive committeemen:

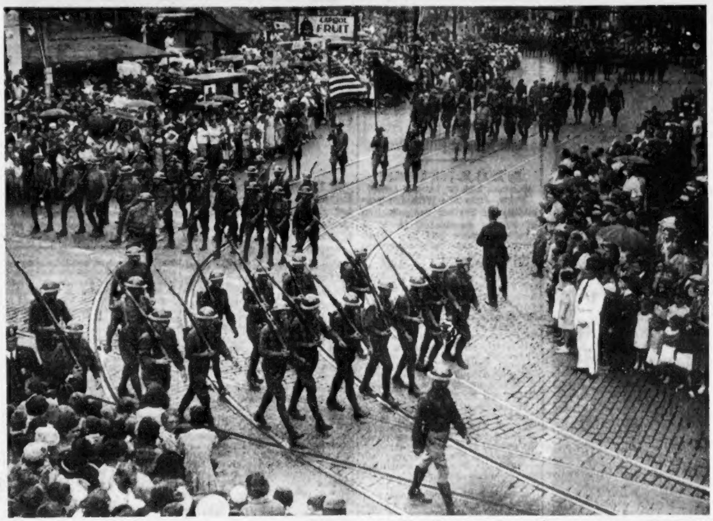
YD VETS LOOKED LIKE THESE IN '17



AS THOUSANDS cheered in Worcester yesterday, 10,000 Yankee Division veterans in convention, marched through the city streets. Above is shown K Company, 181st Infantry, as it swung around Chandler street. Former doughboys had lumps in throat as they paraded and recalled stirring fights in trenches of France during World War.

Hub Priest Gets South Seas Post

Forsaking his post as a curate in Holy Cross Cathedral, the Rev. James G. Hennessy, D. D., sails tomorrow night for far off South Sea islands where he will become chancellor to the bishop in charge of the tropical diocese.

Fr. Hennessy, attached to Cardinal O'Connell's secretarial staff, was transferred from the Boston diocese to the Solomon Islands, located in the Pacific, at the request of Bishop Thomas J. Wade.

The ability and knowledge of navigation which Fr. Hennessy possesses accounts a great deal for the change.

The transfer was granted for five years and on the basis that if Fr. Hennessy should care to return to the United States before his time expired, he would be allowed to do so.

Fr. Hennessy whose home is in Cambridge, has been a long time friend of Bishop Wade. The latter was born and educated in Providence, R. I.

Held in $5,000 In 'Break' Charge

Arthur T. Griffin, 31, of Kimballton street, Dorchester, pleaded not guilty to attempted breaking and entering a Wallingford road, Brighton, house and was held in $5000 by Judge Harry Fayban in Brighton district court today.

Griffin was arrested only on suspicion last Thursday, but tackled the police officers when they arrived at the station house. He was then booked for attempted breaking and entering.

Vacation Shoppers Jam City's Stores

Thousands of last minute shoppers in search of vacation needs in clothes, furniture and sports accessories crowded Boston's department stores yesterday as it was the last Saturday on which the stores are open until next fall.

For the next two months, store employes will have week-end rest periods to spend at the seashore and at the mountains.

Store officials reported an increase in sales volumes, increased business which was reflected in tripled travel reservations reported at the North and South railroad terminals.

Indications point to the best vacation summer for several years in New England, officials said, with increased travel, reported largely because of the recent reductions in fares.

Store executives said that business was tremendously increased in camping accessories departments, as well as in the sales of bicycles, a new interest indulged in by the fair sex.

From clothes to camp cots and golf clubs, men and women crowded these departments in anticipation of the warm weather and its days of fun.

Tugwell in Visit to Quoddy Site

Eastport, Me., June 27—Rexford G. Tugwell, who has attracted considerable criticism against the New Deal with his speeches and resettlement projects, caused a stir by appearing today at the Quoddy dam site.

As the future of the Quoddy settlement is uncertain, Congress having failed to endorse continuation of the $40,000,000 tidal project, Tugwell's visit caused speculation as to possible administration plans.

The Resettlement Bureau chief asserted his visit had no significance but was incidental to a trip to the Maine headquarters of his department at Bangor.

In some quarters opinion was expressed that plans may be in the making for use of Quoddy Village for a resettlement project.

Duty Free Liquor Cut to 1 Gallon

Returning U. S. tourists, American citizens coming from any foreign country, will be unable to bring back, duty free, the customary $100 worth of foreign, retail priced liquor.

Effective today, they are limited to one gallon of distilled spirits, malts or wines, under ruling of the Treasury Department. The action was taken because of various abuses, in which many returned with the legal limit, bought at low foreign prices and sold here at a premium.

In addition, great loss resulted to the government for the past two years, since repeal, on duty and revenue taxes.

Woburn Man Fined $20 for Trespass

William J. O'Keefe, 28, of Sturgis street, Woburn, was found guilty of a charge of trespass yesterday in Malden Court before Judge Maurice R. Flynn and fined $20.

O'Keefe was arrested by Patrolmen James Hughes and Edward Walsh charged with having climbed through the window of the home of James Palmer of Hall street, Everett. Palmer denied that O'Keefe was a friend of the family and said that the man had been ordered to keep away from the house. After the testimony, Judge Flynn imposed the fine.

Eight persons were injured, two of them seriously, in a two-car crash yesterday in East street, Route 11, Westwood.

Joseph F. Vassallo, 66, of 15 St. John street, Jamaica Plain, suffered a possible skull fracture. Louise McCourt, 4, of 442 Washington street, Canton, suffered a laceration on the neck.

The other six, who were cut and bruised, went with them to Norwood Hospital, Norwood. According to police, Joseph F. Vassallo, Jr., 30, of Jamaica Plain, was operating one car and Miss Olive Benoit, 16, of 144 Bradle street, Brockton the other.

Attorneys Defer Dever Meeting

The semi-annual meeting of district attorneys of the state with Atty. Gen. Paul A. Dever, scheduled for today, was postponed until Saturday, July 11, at 10:30 a. m. This was made necessary because of the absence of the attorney general at the Democratic national convention.

'Wreck' Mystery Solved by Vessel

Found drifting off Highland Light and brought here last Friday, the mystery of the broken foremast and a deckload of lumber was solved yesterday, when the Canadian gasboat Ahopaqui put into Providence, revealing she had lost the lumber last Thursday in a gale off Highland Light.

ELLIS KILLING CONFESSION IS REPUDIATED

Noble case soon after starting in at law school," he said, in making his repudiation.

"I visited Noble at State Prison twice a month, for several months, and he told me how his parole was to come up for a hearing soon.

"He thought if I could assist him in getting this story out, it would create a lot of favorable publicity.

"He told me to make notes after I left the prison, and to put it all in a connected story and I would have the whole story. Noble wanted me to be sure it got publicity and that a copy got into [illegible]."

BURGLARY "PLANT"

Archambault said he met Russell Noble near Mrs. Ellis' home and entered by the front door with a key she had given young Noble. He said they found Mrs. Ellis in her room and all three sat there talking.

"She had been drinking before we came in and she continued to drink and smoke while we were there," said Archambault.

"Before Russell left, and after he had had a few drinks she asked him where the hammer was. It seems that she had always been in constant fear of being accidentally walked in on, during his visits.

"It was the custom for Russell to bring along a hammer with him, and she to always have on hand a hundred dollars, her part concerning the money to be known by someone.

"In case of an accidental interruption, Russell was to break the window, take the money on the dresser, jump on the piazza roof and run away, leaving the hammer behind. The money being missing, along with a hammer left behind, was enough in her estimation for her to be able to explain the visitor as a burglar.

"However, on this particular night, as Russell was not to see her himself, he forgot the hammer. She told Russell that he would find a hammer in the kitchen. Russell got the hammer and put it on the dresser."

Noble then left, according to Archambault's repudiated story, and he remained a short time. He said she induced him to stay by saying she would tell his mother and he, in desperation, struck her with the hammer, took the money and watch, and fled.

Mrs. Ida Archambault, his mother, said:

"My son has been studying very hard and I think he is overworked and needs a rest. I will have him see a doctor. He is an inveterate reader of crime books, reading until 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning."

At state prison Russell Noble admitted that Archambault had paid him visits.

'CONFESSION' A HOAX

NORMAND A. ARCHAMBAULT, 19, a Boston law student, who admitted to Haverhill police after grilling that his "confession" of the murder of Mrs. Clara K. Ellis in 1931 was a hoax. He declared the "confession" was conceived in prison by Russell Noble, serving life for the crime, as a means to a pardon.

REICH VIEWS FRENCH CRISIS AS PEACE PERIL

Communist Chief Warns That All France 'Will Protect Self Against Hitler Designs'

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND

(Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service)

Paris, June 27—With the possibility of further radicalization of France considered to be a greater menace and even overshadowing the much-discussed danger of war, the Leon Blum government's earnest efforts to check what seems to be the logical trend of events were considerably hampered today by reports of new strikes and the threat of others.

In view of Germany's alleged attitude toward a real Red France, attributed rightly or wrongly to the Chancellor, he Sovietization of the country, which is the avowed aim of the Communist party, is regarded as a potential menace to peace.

SHIFT TO GENEVA

The spotlight of public interest largely shifted to Geneva today with Blum's departure for the seat of the League of Nations where the council is holding its meeting. The socialist French premier will endeavor in Geneva to strengthen his country's lineup with Great Britain.

Meantime at home, Minister of the Interior Roger Salengro renewed his efforts to stem the new outbreak of strikes with firmness so far as that term can be applied in government conciliation of labor struggles.

At the same time M. Gitton, secretary of the Communist Party of France, declared:

"France will know how to defend herself against the designs of Hitler."

WILL GUARD CONQUESTS

Writing in Avanta Garda, organ of the Communist youth, Gitton warned:

"The France of the popular front, the France that suffers, labors and longs for peace, happiness and joy, will know how to guarantee the defense of her conquests."

The Communist tactics seems to be directed toward instigating a succession of strikes to embarrass the government which does not wish to use force but appeals to the common sense and reason among the restless masses.

Of course, in right party circles it is asserted that France is heading fast and straight for bankruptcy. Rightist leaders declare the masses at present are deaf to intellectual arguments. They reason that events must be left to run their course before the public reaction can set in.

Dr. J. J. Kearney, Ex-Athlete, Dies

Dr. John F. Kearney, 52, dentist, of 15 Winona avenue, Haverhill, died yesterday in Baker Memorial Hospital in Boston after an operation performed a week ago.

Dr. Kearney was born in Worcester, went to school there and was graduated from Holy Cross, class of 1909.

While at Holy Cross, Dr. Kearney enjoyed the unique distinction of being captain of both varsity teams, baseball and football.

Because of his marked proficiency in baseball he was selected for a tryout with Connie Mack in Philadelphia, but because of a shoulder injury in the previous football season, was released.

Dr. Kearney played first base for the Utica Club in the Tri-State League, from 1909 to 1912, and in 1913 for the Haverhill team in the New England League.

From his baseball earnings Dr. Kearney was enabled to get his degree at Tufts Dental, from which he was graduated in 1913.

Dr. Kearney is survived by his wife and two children, Mary E. and John J. He leaves also in Worcester two brothers, Robert and Michael.

Funeral arrangements are not yet complete.

Made To Be Broken?

Democrats Scrap Navy Job Rule

60-Year-Old Mandate Hit In Political Coup

Overlooking no bets in the attempt to bolster the Roosevelt drive for re-election, administration forces have set aside a time-honored regulation which prohibits increases in navy yard forces during the hottest part of a presidential campaign, the Boston Sunday Advertiser learned yesterday.

For sixty years, sudden large increases in these working forces, during the last 60 days of a presidential campaign, have been forbidden.

This year, under a Navy Department order sent to the Boston Navy Yard and all other naval stations on both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, this traditional regulation is shelved.

Under this order, a copy of which came into possession of the Boston Sunday Advertiser yesterday, unlimited numbers of additional men can be employed by the administration next fall when Franklin D. Roosevelt and Gov. Alfred M. Landon will be entering the final stage of their battle for the presidency.

The effect that such a move may have in doubtful states on the outcome of the presidential race is obvious.

New Flouting

This action follows the flouting of civil service rules in demanding that federal employes collect campaign contributions by selling "Roosevelt nominator" certificates, of which $100,000 worth were to be sold in Massachusetts.

It also follows many months of diversion of federal relief millions, with political ends in view, as well as the organization of "pep" meetings recently at which attendance of all Works Progress Administration staff employes was mandatory.

"No increase of the force at any navy yard shall be made at any time within 60 days next before any election to take place for President of the United States..."

This quotation is from a federal law, dated June 30, 1876.

But the same law further provides that the Secretary of the Navy may declare that public emergency requires the hiring of larger working forces during those 60 days.

This saving clause has been invoked by the present administration to set aside the rule.

The excuse is given that the shipbuilding program must be pushed. It was pointed out, however, by Navy Yard employes, yesterday, that building war vessels does not necessarily require opening the gates of the yards to increased numbers of workmen during the last 60 days of the present campaign. Political considerations on the other hand, might require that very thing, it was said.

Official Order

The official Navy Department order reads:

"1—For the purpose of prosecuting the shipbuilding program without unnecessary delay, incident to bringing the Navy up to treaty strength, which will necessitate increases in the forces at Navy Yards and other naval activities, the department has published a general certificate in order to comply with the requirements of the Act of June 30, 1876, which provides as follows:

"'No increase of the force at any Navy Yard shall be made at any time within sixty days next before any election to take place for President of the United States, or Member of Congress, except when the Secretary of the Navy shall certify that the needs of the public service make such increase necessary at that time, which certificate shall be immediately published when made.'

"2—In accordance with the Department's action above states, commandants and commanding officers are authorized to continue to increase the forces at Navy Yards and naval activities under their command as may be necessary to prosecute the work assigned, without reference to the Department for the necessary authority under the above quoted Act."

This leaves the way open for the political managers of the Roosevelt organization, headed by Chairman James A. Farley, to take steps to swell the working forces at the Boston Navy Yard and other stations during the crucial last two months of the present campaign.

Already Farley's signature has gone out on hundreds of thousands of the so-called "Roosevelt nominator" certificates, sent to Federal employes with instructions to sell them at $1 each, in spite of Civil Service regulations forbidding such political activity either by department heads, like Farley himself, or by employes.

There are plenty of other indications that every possible reservoir of votes and every source of possible political strength will be tapped as the campaign progresses, without regard for American custom and tradition, not to mention statute law.

Political considerations are seen by many observers in the shifts and changes made and impending, in the Federal relief organization in this state.

The white-collar projects have been thrown into a chaotic state, with the result that the workers on these projects are uncertain as to their future at the very time that energetic efforts are being made to organize them into a union.

Paul Edwards, acting Massachusetts administrator, was advertised to speak last Thursday at an organization meeting, but did not appear. Union representatives asserted he had authorized the use of his name in the leaflets announcing the meeting. His failure to appear was not taken too much to heart by the organizers in view of the fact that he is about to be replaced and that his indicted successor is known to look favorably on unionizing of relief workers.

The Thursday meeting was held at the Y. W. C. A. auditorium at Stuart and Clarendon streets, Back Bay, under the auspices of the American Federation of Government Employes, Local 294, affiliated with the A. F. of L. Speakers included President Kay of the local and Mrs. Julia O'Connor Parker, president of the Telephone Operators Department, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Changes in the music project branch of the relief organization here have taken control out of the hands of local individuals, where it has heretofore reposed, and placed it securely in the hands of Washington chiefs.

Hereafter the Washington regional office will have full direct control of these projects. William Haddon of the New England Conservatory of Music was made director of the Boston projects without consulting the advisory board which is headed by Arthur Fiedler, popular leader of the Pops concerts and the summertime Esplanade symphony orchestra.

As Haddon's assigned duties conflicted with those of W. Duncan Russell, who was known as executive director, Russell resigned three days ago. There had in the past been criticism of Russell from individual workers but there was no complaint at the system of administering of the projects and Russell was supported by the advisory board.

The board protested against the change to Nikolai Sokoloff, national administrator of federal music projects, but achieved nothing by addressing him.

Besides Fiedler, other members of the board are John P. Marshall, dean of music at Boston University; Wallace Goodrich, director of the New England Conservatory of Music; Russell Ames Cook, John O'Shea and Carl Gardiner. Prof. Archibald T. Davidson of Harvard has resigned.

Demotion of two asistants to Russell, A. Buckingham Simson and Ernst Hoffman, has added to the complications.

Another disclosure yesterday was the fact that the Resettlement Administration, the creation of Rexford G. Tugwell, has a staff of 26 administrative employes here, although there is not a single Resettlement Administration project in Massachusetts. The administration has had offices here for 12 months and has spent $100,000.

This bureau is said to have loaned $90,000 to Massachusetts farmers, but always on excellent security. An exhibit, glorifying the work of this branch of the New Deal in other parts of the country, is now being shown in Boston.

Arthur G. Rotch, former Massachusetts administrator, who was succeeded by Paul Edwards, in a speech read before the 43d quarterly meeting of the New England Council, branded the Works Progress Administration as a failure and explained how it proved inadequate to relieve the municipalities of welfare expenditures, as had been promised.

Miss Anna Coll Wed To Police Officer

Miss Anna J. Coll of Somerville was married yesterday to Patrolman Joseph McBrearty, traffic division of the Boston Police Department, in the Church of St. Catherine of Genoa, Spring Hill, Somerville.

The bride, daughter of the late Michael Coll and Mrs. Sarah O'Neill, is an instructor in Southern Junior High School, Somerville, and a member of the Somerville Library board of trustees. She is also active in the Central Council of Irish County Clubs and principal of the evening division of Chandler Secretarial School.

FARLEY CHOSEN NATIONAL HEAD OF PARTY AGAIN

His Resignation as Postmaster-General Seen Shortly; Morgan Named Treasurer

Philadelphia, June 27 (INS)—(INS)—James A. Farley, President Roosevelt's campaign manager, was unanimously re-elected Democratic national chairman at a meeting of the new national committeemen and women this afternoon.

The only significance of this action was further proof that Farley's resignation as postmaster-general is imminent, as reported last Monday by International News Service.

Farley will make his formal announcement about the cabinet post following his return to Washington.

The only changes of note in committee management were that W. Forbes Morgan, who has been secretary, was elected national treasurer.

L. W. (Chip) Robert, of Atlanta, who has been assistant secretary was named national secretary.

GARNER TALKS

Vice-President Garner, who is vice-chairman of the committee, addressed the meeting briefly in praise of President Roosevelt and added that, for himself, he wanted to continue presiding over the Senate for four more years.

Guy T. Helvering, of Kansas, collector of internal revenue, placed Farley in nomination and he was elected by acclamation.

campaign—Roosevelt and Garner and the New Deal."

Farley read the resignation of Walter J. Cummings as national treasurer, who requested that his name not be put up again.

A sub-committee was appointed to hear the contests over seating of committee members from Arizona, Minnesota, Washington and the Canal Zone.

NAME VICE-CHAIRMAN

Frank Hague of New Jersey, Miss Mary Dewson, head of the women's division, and Mrs. Emma Guffey Miller of Pennsylvania, were elected vice-chairmen. Garner, Governor A. B. Chandler of Kentucky; David E. Fitzgerald, Sr., of Connecticut; James P. Aylward, Missouri; A. S. Brown, Utah; Charles Broughton, Wisconsin; Louis Jiggitis, Mississippi; Mrs. Anna Struble, South Dakota; Mrs. Samuel Ralston, Indiana; Mrs. L. Del Valle Grady, California; Miss Helen N. Hanson, Maine, and Mrs. Douglas W. Brown, West Virginia, also were elected vice-chairmen, and the meeting adjourned.

Lemke Plans to Run in All States

Chicago, June 27 (AP)—Rep. William Lemke, (R-Nd.), candidate for President on the union party ticket, said today his name would appear on the ballot in "practically all" of the 48 states in November despite election laws which bar entry of a new party slate so close to election day.

In states where the union party will not be able to appear under its own name, Lemke said his name and that of his vice-presidential running mate, Thomas O'Brien, of Boston, would be used by "other groups which have already filed nominations and will be on the ballot."

A number of such groups have already offered to follow such an arrangement, the North Dakota Republican asserted. These, he said, included "local farm and labor" units, Father Charles Coughlin's union for social justice, the late Huey Long's share-the-wealth movement and Dr. Francis E. Townsend's old age pension movement.

The Senator

Farley 'Pilfered Tomb' at Philly

Mass. Boys Quit the Works To Escape Speeches

TIMMY,
Timmy's Tavern, Boston, Mass.
Dear Timmy:

Well, Timmy, it is all over, even the shouting, and they have named the off-spring, Roosevelt and Garner. Surprise! Surprise!

The Senator

Many of the Massachusetts boys have a head start, like yourself, and are under the wire before another speech can get going. In fact, Maurice Tobin, after breaking Joe McGrath's card of special selections and getting himself elected a delegate over Charlie McGlue, has two days' handicap away from the post and is out of hog-calling radius at the windup. He returned home for treatment of a severe case of tin ear, which is epidemic.

The major accomplishment of the week, Timmy, you are not on hand to see. This major accomplishment of the week is engineered by Major Joe Timilty, the aide to Governor Jim, and what is it but he jockeys Massachusetts' ambassador John E. Brennan into the purchase of an ice cream suit.

Major an Arbiter

Ambassador John Brennan, a large man as you know, has his mind and heart set on something in a subdued tone like a battleship gray, but he takes Major Joe Timilty with him on the shopping expedition and comes up with everything but gold braid and a sword. Then it comes up rain.

In the cold light of retrospection, Timmy, that will probably stand out as the major accomplishment of a week devoted exclusively by the New Deal Democrats to whistling in cemetery dark while Mr. Farley steals the tombstone.

It will go down in history as the Finnan Haddie convention, hooked, salted, cut and dried. Nothing happens that was not foreordained a year ago, except Ambassador John Brennan's ice cream suit. It's engineered by Mayor Joe Timilty as a last minute surprise in the way of stirring the delegates from lethargy.

Many records are established among them, one for general inattention and non-attendance by the delegates, and another by the 53 speeches seconding the nomination, which finally result in those who are left in the gallery starting to clap their hands and yell, "Take him out."

Many of the speakers think this is only applause, a misinterpretation which adds no little to the ultimate degree of suffering. The clerk who calls the roll, informs me in the sad gloaming that this is the only national convention he has one roll call to call.

He had 143 in Madison Square Garden, 39 in Chicago and 18 in Houston and despite the fact he is in very good voice here they only have him call the roll once. At all the other sessions they can tell without calling the roll that there is nobody in the house. Everybody is unanimous anyway, especially on the question of adjourning sine die before they all die of ennui.

$1 Per for Speech

By the time they got around to nominating Jack Garner this afternon there is nobody in the gallery but the band, and many of the delegates, including the Texans, have taken their knitting home. Everybody is allowed, as a matter of self-defense, to make a seconding speech.

What they did was when they sell anybody one of those $1 nominator tickets they bring him here to make a speech. If everybody who makes a speech gives $1 to the campaign this is a very nice fund, indeed.

During the general confusion which attends the speech-making, Mr. Bob Bigney of South Boston attempts to climb on the platform, but is intercepted in the act by a guard, who has never heard of Mr. Bob Bigney of South Boston. It is rumored that this guard is a close friend of Uncle Dan, but this lacks verification.

This is a very nice go between Mr. Bob Bigney and the guard, the outcome of which is a retreat by Mr. Bob Bigney. The salt rubbed into the wound of this affair is that Mr. John Baccus immediately thereafter successfull negotiated the passage to the platform past the same guard.

The majority of the attendants at the final session, Timmy, are women, thus bearing out the old belief that women can stand more pain than men and successfully hide their suffering.

"Sarge" Ben Poses

Sergeant Benjamin Poole, the prominent policeman and Forty-and-Eighter, is in nearly all of the last day convention pictures, posing with Paul Whiteman under "Before and After" captions and Billy O'Hare, from Charlestown. The former institutions commissioner, is making these rogue's gallery photographs. This is a very sturdy trio.

Leo Halloran of Quincy, informs me that he will not withdraw from the Governor's Council fight in the Second District to clear the way for Charlie Fitzgerald and an unopposed nomination to battle Joe Grossman, The Republican shingle dealers. So it looks like the Democrats are getting back to normal again and will soon be fighting among themselves.

Joe McGrath attends his first meeting of the national committee where general amazement is expressed that Massachusetts is still a member of the committee. They have not seen hide nor hair of Joe Ely for three long years.

To prevent any disturbances at the final windup, all the doorkeepers had instructions to inquire of those seeking admission as to who is Al Smith. The password was "never heard of him." "Yet if you listened hard, Timmy, you can catch the nostalgic, haunting echo of a song that will not die.

Gen. Exodus Rules

Well, Timmy, it has been a hard scrapple for all concerned to keep awake and I do not know what we would have done if you had not been on hand to dish up the cheer. It is the only convention that nobody sends any postcards from to his friends saying, "Wish you were here." Some such cards have been sent, but only to Republicans.

General Exodus is holding forth today and he is the guy with the most popular title of the convention, When all the delegates have gone and Franklin D. has gone, and they start sweeping the admission cards out of the streets, B. Franklin will still be here on the big pedestal with the searchlight on him and the inscription under his feet which heads as follows:

"It is hard for an empty to stand upright.

"Experience keeps a dear school but fools will learn at no other."

Imagine leaving that thing standing during the whole convention for a lot of New Deal Democrats to read.

Timmy, if you ask me, the Donkey has taken a fine ride.

THE SENATOR.

CROWD HUSHED AS PRESIDENT MAKES SPEECH

Impressive Spectacle as 120,000 Listen, Sleuths Guard All Exits to Huge Stadium

By WIN BROOKS
(Staff Writer Boston Sunday Advertiser)

Franklin Field, Philadelphia, Pa., June 27—One of the most colorful and impressive spectacles in the nation's political history was the setting for President Roosevelt's acceptance address delivered here tonight.

Into the double-tiered stadium, under a fathomless inverted blue bowl of a moon-lit sky, more than 120,000 men, women and children waited for hours, finally to acclaim the President, cheer his lashing attack on administration critics and thunder applause of his expressed determination to continue new deal policies without retreat.

As a crowd spectacle—as a partisan crowd spectacle—it was without parallel.

The rain ended shortly before seven o'clock and as darkness closed in and the huge floodlights were turned on, it found the steep pitches of the vast cement tiers a solid bank of walls of humanity rising to a height of 150 feet above the flat sweep of the stadium turf where the standards of the states were lifted over the seated delegation.

Huge portraits of President Roosevelt and Vive-President Garner were brightly illuminated at the rear of the platform and along the decorated flanks on each side were the portraits of all past Presidents of the United States, framed by the draped colors.

Beside and immediately in front of the platform, were 600 crowded press seats, and beyond them, separated by a narrow passageway crammed with secret service agents and policemen, sat the Democratic delegations, bathed in the flood of the overhead light batteries.

Sound was a confused medley of indistinguishable noises welling out of the half-dark in the hour immediately preceding the President's arival, a droning overtone punctuated now and again by a shrill cry, a rebel yell, some iron-lunged admonition bellowed from the distant reaches of the top tiers. It continued, was audible above the selections of the symphony orchestra grouped by the magnifiers in the press section—the voices of 100,000 people, 100,000 Democrats.

DIVA SINGS

Only once before the President spoke it was stilled.

A slim, fair woman in a rich evening dress walked out to the top of the runway, help up her hand for silence and began to sing. With the first lift of that golden voice through the amplifiers the overtone ended and a silence unbroken except for song, fell over the vast arena.

It was Lily Pons, singing, "Lo, Hear the Gentle Lark."

No song of any voice but hers was audible in all this great sky-canopied auditorium.

Then the gates swung wide at the end of the stadium, a fleet of cars swept through and the President came into the beam of the great searchlight.

One vast roar welled up from the massed thousands, lifted a fountain of sound into the sky, splashed down from it and rose and rose again.

The band played, "Happy Days."

MOTHER'S WELCOME

Extends It to Presidential Son

Philadelphia, June 27 (AP)—Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt formed an enthusiastic family welcoming committee of one tonight for her Presidential son and his family.

She arrived by motor a few hours after the five children of the President had left for Washington to travel back with him to the notification ceremonies.

Several friends had gathered at the country estate here of Mr. and Mrs. William Donner to lunch with her. Among them were the young Mrs. Donner Roosevelt, former wife of Elliot Roosevelt, and daughter of the host and hostess.

Her small son, "Billie," was the first down the broad steps of the Donner home to greet his great-grandmother. He was made even happier by being permitted to lunch at the table with the adults.

Mrs. Roosevelt was elated, although still walking with a cane following a recent accident in which she broke her hip.

"I said nothing like a broken hip would keep me away," she laughed as she entered the Donner drawing room, "and it didn't. Here I am."

She arranged to board the President's special after the ceremony to travel with him back to her Hyde Park home.

The committee in charge was made up of Mrs. Rebecca Smith Adams, James Collins, Cleveland Gilcreast, the Rev. Dana MacL. Greeley, Miss Eleanor Maguire, James A. Moakley, Harold Pfeiffer and Mrs. Ruth R. Ray.

AL SMITH GOLFS FAR FROM DIN

New York, June 27—Far from the tumult of Philadelphia Governor and Mrs. Alfred E. Smith are spending the week-end in a bungalow on the property of the Canoe Place Inn, Hampton Bays, L. I., it was learned today.

Smith and his sons, Walter and Arthur, played golf this afternoon on the links of the Southampton Golf Club.

The former governor's daughter and son-in-law, Major John A. Warner, head of the state police, have a summer home in Southampton and his son, Arthur, has a cottage in Westhampton Beach.

Smith was unavailable to reporters seeking his views on the proceedings at the Democratic national convention.

Harvard Pupil Preaches Today

The Rev. George Harvey O'Donnell of Aurora, Indiana, who is at present taking a course at Harvard College, will preach at the Trinity Baptist Church, East Arlington, this Sunday morning, taking for his subject "The Ninety and Nine."

Chinese Wants to Wed Twice

One marriage ceremony is sufficient for one couple, City Clerk Frederick Burke, of Cambridge, ruled yesterday in refusing a marriage license to Juin Shyr, 23, and Le Yao, 23, both of Kirkland street.

Shyr explained he and Miss Yao had been married in China, but wished to be united according to American law.

Burke explained that a ceremony recognized in China was recognised here, and that he could not grant a license to persons already wed to each other.

President Roosevelt Lashes 'Economic Tyranny' of Foes in Acceptance Speech

ACCUSES G. O. P. OF HIDING BEHIND CONSTITUTION, FLAG

Senator Robinson, Members of the Democratic convention, my friends:

We meet at a time of great moment to the future of the nation. It is an occasion to be dedicated to the simple and sincere expression of an attitude toward problems, the determination of which will profoundly affect America.

I come not only as the leader of a party—not only as a candidate for high office, but as one upon whom many critical hours have imposed and still impose a grave responsibility.

For the sympathy, help, and confidence with which Americans have sustained me in my task I am grateful. For their loyalty I salute the members of our great party, in and out of official life in every part of the Union. I salute those of other parties, especially those in the Congress, who on so many occasions put partisanship aside. I thank the governors of the several states, their Legislatures, their state and local officials who participated unselfishly and regardless of party in our efforts to achieve recovery and destroy abuses. Above all, I thank the millions of Americans who have borne disaster bravely and have dared to smile through the storm.

Won Over Fear

America will not forget these recent years—will not forget that the rescue was not a mere party task—it was the concern of all of us. In our strength we rose together, rallied our energies together, applied the old rules of common sense, and together survived.

In those days we shared care. That is why we feared fear. And today, my friends, we have won against the most dangerous of our foes—we have conquered fear.

But I can not, with candor, tell you that all is well with the world. Clouds of suspicion, tides of ill-will and intolerance gather darkly in many places. In our own land, we enjoy indeed a fullness of life greater than that of most nations. But the rush of modern civilization itself has raised for us new difficulties, new problems which must be solved, if we are to preserve to the United States the political and economic freedom for which Washington and Jefferson planned and fought.

Philadelphia is a good city in which to write American history.

Pledges Freedom

This is fitting ground on which to reaffirm the faith of our fathers; to pledge ourselves to restore to the people a wider freedom—to give to 1936 as the founders gave to 1776 — an American way of life.

The very word freedom, in itself and of necessity, suggests freedom from some restraining power. In 1776 we sought freedom from the tyranny of a political autocracy—from the Eighteenth Century Royalists, who held special privileges from the Crown. It was to perpetuate their privilege that they governed without the consent of the governed; that they denied the right of free assembly and free speech; that they restricted the worship of God; that they put the average man's property and the average man's life in pawn to the mercenaries of dynastic power—that they regimented the people.

When They Heard the News

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT (right) grasps the hand of his runningmate, Vice-President John N. Garner, at Franklin Field, Philadelphia, as they are formally notified that they are again the Democratic national ticket. A throng estimated at 120,000 persons roared a welcome. This exceptional Soundphoto from International News Photograph Service, Inc., shows the Presidential and vice-Presidential smiles, the delight of the two men as their hands meet.

And so it was to win freedom from the tyranny of political autocracy that the American revolution was fought. That victory gave the business of governing into the hands of the average man, who won the right with his neighbors to make and order his own destiny through his own government. Political tyranny was wiped out at Philadelphia on July 4, 1776.

Since that struggle, however, man's inventive genius released new forces in our land which reordered the lives of our people. The age of machinery, of railroads, of steam and electricity; the telegraph and the radio; mass production, mass distribution—all of these combined to bring forward a new civilization and with it a new problem for those who would remain free.

For out of this modern civilization economic Royalists carved new dynasties. New kingdoms were built upon concentration of control over material things. Through new uses of corporations, banks and securities, new machinery of industry and agriculture, of labor and capital—all undreamed of by the fathers—the whole structure of modern life was impressed into this royal service.

There was no place among the royalty for our many thousands of small business men and merchants who sought to make a worthy use of the American system of initiative and profit. They were no more free than the worker or the farmer. Even honest and progressive-minded men of wealth, aware of their obligation to their generation, could never know just where they fitted into this dynastic scheme of things.

It was natural and perhaps human that the privileged princes of these new economic dynasties, thirsting for power, reached out for control over government itself. They created a new despotism and wrapped it in the robes of legal sanction. In its service new mercenaries sought to regiment the people, their labor and their properties. And as a result the average man once more confronts the problem that faced the Minute Man.

Monopoly Scored

The hours men and women worked, the wages they received, the conditions of their labor—these had passed beyond the control of the people, and were imposed by this new industrial dictatorship. The savings of the average family, the capital of the small business man, the investments set aside for old age—other people's money—these were tools which the new economic royalty used to dig itself in.

Those who tilled the soil no longer reaped the rewards which were their right. The small measure of their gains was decreed by men in distant cities.

Throughout the nation, opportunity was limited by monopoly. Individual initiative was crushed in the cogs of a great machine. The field open for free business was more and more restricted. Private enterprise became too private. It became privileged enterprise, not free enterprise.

An old English judge once said: "Necessitous men are not free men." Liberty requires opportunity to make a living—a living decent according to the standard of the time, a living which gives man not only enough to live by, but something to live for.

For too many of us the political equally we once had won was meaningless in the face of economic inequality. A small group had concentrated into their own hands an almost complete control over other people's property, other people's money, other people's labor—other people's lives. For too many of us life was no longer free; liberty no longer real; men could no longer follow the pursuit of happiness.

Against economic tyranny such as this, the citizen could only appeal to the organized power of government. The collapse of 1929 showed up the despotism for what it was. The election of 1932 was the people's mandate to end it. Under that mandate it is being ended.

Hits at Royalists

The Royalists of the economic order have conceded that political freedom was the business of the government, but they have maintained that economic slavery was nobody's business. They granted that the government could protect the citizen in his right to vote but they denied that the government could do anything to protect the citizen in his right to work and live.

Today we stand committed to the proposition that freedom is no half and half affair. If the average citizen is guaranteed equal opportunity in the polling place, he must have equal opportunity in the market place.

The economic Royalists complain that we seek to overthrow the institutions of America. What they really complain of is that we seek to take away their power. Our allegiance to American institutions requires the overthrow of this kind of power. In vain they seek to hide behind the flag and the Constitution. In their blindess they forget what the flag and the Constitution stand for. Now, as always, the flag and the Constitution stand for Democracy, not tyranny; for freedom, not subjection; and against a dictatorship by mob rule and the overprivileged alike.

PLEDGES TO WAGE WAR ON WANT, ECONOMIC DISTRESS

'Must Fight Enemy'

The brave and clear platform adopted by this convention, to which I heartily subscribe, sets forth that government in a modern civilization has certain inescapable obligations to its citizens, among which are protection of the family and the home, the establishment of a democracy of opportunity, and aid to those overtaken by disaster.

But the resolute enemy within our gates is ever ready to beat down our words unless in greater courage we will fight for them.

For more than three years we have fought for them. This convention in every word and deed has pledged that that fight will go on.

The defeats and victories of these years have given to us as a people a new understanding of our government and of ourselves. Never since the early days of the New England town meeting have the affairs of government been so widely discussed and so clearly appreciated. It has been brought home to us that the only effective guide for the safety of this most worldly of worlds is moral principle.

Cites Gospel

We do not see faith, hope and charity as unattainable ideals, but we use them as stout supports of a nation fighting the fight for freedom in a modern civilization.

Faith—In the soundness of Democracy in the midst of dictatorships.

Hope—Renewed because we know so well the progress we have made.

Charity—In the true spirit of that grand old word. For charity literally translated from the original means love, the love that understands, that does not merely share the wealth of the giver, but in true sympathy and wisdom helps men to help themselves.

We seek not merely to make government a mechanical implement, but to give it the vibrant personal character that is the embodiment of human charity.

We are poor indeed if this nation can not afford to lift from every recess of American life the dread fear of the unemployed that they are not needed in the world. We can not afford to accumulate a deficit in the books of human fortitude.

In the place of the palace of privilege we seek to build a temple out of faith and hope and charity.

It is a sobering thing to be a servant of this great cause. We try in our daily work to remember that the cause belongs not to us but to the people. The standard is not in the hands of you and me alone. It is carried by America. We seek daily to profit from experience, to learn to do better as our task proceeds.

Governments can err—Presidents do make mistakes, but the immortal Dante tells us that divine justice weighs the sins of the cold-blooded and the sins of the warm-hearted in different scales.

Better the occasional faults of a government that lives in a spirit of charity than the consistent omissions of a government frozen in the ice of its own indifference.

There is a mysterious cycle in human events. To some generations much is given. Of others much is expected. This generation of Americans has a rendezvous with destiny.

In this world of ours in other lands, there are some people, who, in times past, have lived and fought for freedom, and seem to have grown too weary to carry on the fight. They have sold their heritage of freedom for the illusion of a living. They have yielded their democracy.

I believe in my heart that only our success can stir their ancient hope. They began to know that here in America we are waging a great war. It is not alone a war against want and destitution and economic demoralization. It is a war for the survival of Democracy. We are fighting to save a great and precious form of government for ourselves and for the world.

I accept the commision you have tendered me. I join with you. I am enlisted for the duration of the war.

Girl Defies 'Ride' Threat, Keeps Job

Undisturbed by threats that she "would be taken for a ride", a Swampscott school girl continued her summer work at Tedesco Golf and Country Club today.

The girl, Loretta Pinto, 18-year-old daughter of Mrs. Mildred Faella of Humphrey street, Swampscott, received a threatening note yesterday. It warned her not to continue associating with a certain crowd of girls. It was signed "A Friend."

Mrs. Faella turned it over to police and hand-writing experts who are working on the theory it was written by a married man who hoped, to scare the girl from going with undesirable company.

Church to Weigh City Government

City government and what it implies will be the subject of the discourse this evening in the West Medford Baptist Church. Mayor John G. Irwin and Pastor Eugene D. Dolloff will speak.

Garner Blasts Old Deal's Methods; Lauds New Deal as Protector of Poor

Vice-President-Elect Swears to Back Roosevelt in Acceptance Address

Mr. Chairman, friends:

My words shall be as few as they shall be fervent and sincere. I am a soldier and my duty is to follow where the commander leads. I accept the rules of war as laid down in the platform.

I am not insensible of the high honor which has been conferred upon me. This confidence which my fellow countrymen have reposed in me I accept as a solemn trust. And I am not unmindful of the responsibility which goes with that trust.

I gladly accept the nomination for the vice-presidency now tendered to me for the second time. The sense of personal satisfaction in this honor is enhanced and heightened by the thought that I am again to be on the ticket with Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

Renews Pledge

I shall stand with him in the months ahead as I stood with him before the voters of this country in 1932—as I have stood, in sharing with him since March 4, 1933, the obligations and duties and responsibilities which the Constitution imposes.

Franklin Delano Roosevelt is my leader, my commander-in-chief. In this presence, before this multitude and with the stars of heaven to bear witness to my covenant, I renew the pledge of fealty I gave four years ago.

In Franklin Delano Roosevelt the hopes of a nation have been reborn. Despair has given place to confidence. Despondency and gloom have made way for happiness. Laughter is again heard in the land.

We are now, as it were, midway in our course. Great as are the things which have been accomplished to bring order out of chaos in which we found the country in March, 1933, much remains to be done.

No Return

There must be no return to old conceptions denominated as the old deal.

And what do we mean by the old deal? We mean a political system which fosters an economic order giving special privilege to a few favored ones through the sacrifices of the many. By the New Deal we mean simply an adaption of the laws of the country so that the greatest good will come to the greatest number—the protection of the rights of that vast majority of our populace, men, women, and children—to whom the Old Deal meant want, hardship, despair and degradation.

Our people have not forgotten the wretchedness to which these sins of omission and commission of twelve years of the Old Deal had plunged the country when the New Deal was ushered in on a March day in 1933. But the dawn of a new day was at hand. The time for a change had come. The country welcomed a new leader.

And I cheerfully bear witness here and now to the loyal support of New Deal measures and principles accorded in Congress by certain of our friends of the opposition. With voice and vote many brethren of Republican persuasion have shown how they could, in time of national peril, rise above partisanship and heed the call for help of a stricken country.

Proud to Stand

We still ask for the support of all those who believe as we do that the function of government is to protect the many from the selfishness of the few, to guarantee to all the means of livelihood and participation in the things that make life good and noble and worth the living.

That is our platform. Upon that platform I stand and I am proud to stand with our leader—a leader who has never faltered in his course and never once lost faith that in the sovereign will of the American people rests true wisdom in government and the way to security, peace and happiness.

In that faith I put my trust. In that faith I pledge anew my allegiance to Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

ROOSEVELT WARNS CRITICS HE WILL FIGHT 'SLAVERY'

the New Deal, President Roosevelt declared:

"The economic royalists complain that we seek to overthrow the institutions of America.

"What they really complain of is that we seek to take away their power.

"Our allegiance to American institutions requires the overthrow of this kind of power.

"ENLISTS FOR WAR"

"In vain they seek to hide behind the flag and the Constitution.

"In their blindness they forget what the flag and the Constitution stand for."

A tumult of cheers that broke out with increasing volume throughout the President's speech reached a roaring crescendo as the President climax his address with these words:

"I accept the commission you have tendered me. I join you. I am enlisted for the duration of the war."

The immense crowd stood and cheered themselves hoarse. Banners waved. The band played.

In the heat of the excitement more than 100 persons fainted and had to be given first aid.

President Roosevelt declared that the "New Deal" has won the battle against economic depression for the American people "who have borne disaster bravely and have dared to smile through the storm."

Referring to the early days of his administration he said:

"In those days, we feared fear. That was why we fought fear.

"And today, my friends, we have won against the most dangerous of our foes—we have conquered fear."

The imposing convention held its last session in the magnificent auditorium, nominated Garner, transacted a seemingly-endless list of routine business and adjourned sine die this afternoon.

This was the ninth session of the convention which began Tuesday forenoon, which was marked by abrogation of the historic two-thirds rule, by the adoption of a 100 per cent New Deal platform, by a deluge or oratory praising the President and by overwhelming demonstrations breaking all records of tensity, volume and duration.

The delegates and alternates tonight sat beneath their state standards in Franklin Field in the same relative layout they had occupied in the great convention hall. Although their convention was over and they attended informally, this location was reserved in compliment to them and in order that the vast outdoor audience might get an impression of the appearance of a national political assembly.

BREAK TRADITION

In accepting their nominations at a formal "meeting of notification" at the scene of their nominations, President Roosevelt and Vice President Garner broke another Democratic Party tradition. President Roosevelt flew to Chicago in 1932 but he made his address to a formal session of the convention itself, and Vice President Garner did not then appear to accept personally the high honor.

More than 5000 nominators' meetings were held throughout the country tonight—in theaters, ballrooms, public parks and political headquarters—to hear the broadcast of the President's and Vice-President's addresses. These meetings were arranged by the national and state Democratic committees under the general supervision of Chairman James A. Farley, who estimated they were to be attended by 1,000,000 persons.

NET $500,000

Admission fees were charged to these meetings as well as to the great brick stadium here tonight. These events were assumed to net $500,000 for the party's campaign chest.

As in the traditional notification meetings of the past, it had been arranged that President Roosevelt would be notified of his nomination by Senator Robinson, the permanent chairman of the convention, and Vice-President Garner by Senator Barkley, the temporary chairman.

In anticipation of an enormous crowd—the largest probably in political annals—announcement had been made that the gates would be closed as soon as the vast auditorium was filled to its capacity. Preceding the successive appearance of Mr. Garner and Mr. Roosevelt, a spectacular entertainment program had been arranged, including vaudeville, a concert by the famous Philadelphia Orchestra and a repertoire of songs by Lily Pons.

NO OTHER NAME

Under the same conditions of harmony which had prevailed throughout its proceedings, the Roosevelt-controlled convention renominated Vice-President Garner with acclaim.

Garner was the only one placed in nomination. As in the case of the President's nomination, the convention suspended its rules, averted a call of the roll of the states and conferred the honor upon Garner by acclamation.

The once-Texas cowboy, now a veteran of more than 30 years in congressional service, had stepped aside for Roosevelt at Chicago in 1932, threw his Texas and California delegations to Roosevelt and thus insured the present President's nomination there when he was threatened with defeat under the two-thirds rule.

In return Roosevelt took Garner for his running mate despite the protests of the East and they marched forward together in triumph in the November elections. The convention today cemented the same team for a campaign in which the great guns will be thundered by Roosevelt as they were four years ago.

Garner was placed in nomination by Governor James V. Allred of Texas in the presence of the smallest attendance since the notable convention began its extraordinary sessions last Tuesday. Scarcely more than half the 3000 delegates and alternates were in their seats and the galleries held probably 1000 spectators in contrast to the cheering, screeching crowds of 12,000 that had participated in the meetings during the week.

READS LIKE NOVEL

Garner's life story, Allred said, reads like a novel—"a challenge to the inspiration of the youth of this country." From youth on the frontier and a rider of the plains Garner rose to eminence in the business and banking world, to speakership of the House of Representatives and the Vice-Presidency. Allred recalled in painting the life story of the man who was once known to his congressional colleagues as "Cactus Jack."

Taking a shot at the "Three Long Years" slogan of the Republican National Convention, Governor Allred said:

"Three long years of Democratic good government beats three preceding years of senility, know nothingness, do nothingness.

"Three long years of happiness beats three long years of long faces."

President Roosevelt's nomination had produced 54 speeches in the eight and one-half hours of oratory, broken only by a recess for dinner. Garner was seconded by the oratorical representatives of only 22 states and under the active encouragement of Chairman Robinson the orators adopted a program of brevity.

The parade of pro-Garner oratory completed, Robinson "recognized" Senator James F. Byrnes of South Carolina, prominent in New Deal management, "to make a motion."

Byrns from the rostrum said:

"Mr. Chairman, I move that the convention suspend its rules and nominate John Nance Garner of Texas, as the nominee of this convention for Vice-President by acclamation."

The motion was put by Robinson, was adopted by the harmonious convention with unanimity and Garner was declared the nominee under eactly the same conditions as the nomination of President Roosevelt.

Parole Attitude Of Lyman Lauded

Rep. Thomas Dorgan of Dorchester today sent a letter to State Commissioner of Corrections Arthur T. Lyman complimenting him for his courage in making public the fact that there is no control over 2000 paroled convicts in Massachusetts.

In his letter Dorgan said:

"Now that the public realizes the serious situation concerning paroled convicts I believe that the proper procedure for you would be to see Gov. Curley next Monday and request that he send a special message to the Legislature.

"I know that if the same time and effort was put into this matter as is put in others your request will be reasonably considered.'

3 Boys Confess Apartment Blaze

While playing with matches, three small boys admitted setting a fire that razed an unoccupied fourth floor apartment house at 15 Dalton street, Back Bay, yesterday, police said. Damage was estimated at $2000.

Scores of people in adjoining apartments were driven to the street.

According to police, one youngster told a policeman that he and two others had been playing with matches in the cellar of the house.

Hyannis Streets Open, Says C. C.

Hyannis, June 27—The widely circulated report about the impassability of the streets here, owing to the installation of the new sewer system, is greatly exaggerated. The Chamber of Commerce says so.

True, the ordinarily smooth surfaces in the center of town are a bit on the rough side, but, the Chamber insists, the ways are open and traffic is not impeded in any quarter.

Norman at Convention

Bad Comedy; Hero Only in Last Act

'Every Other Man Met at Session Was Woman'

By WINSTON NORMAN

(Copyright, 1936, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Philadelphia, June 27—Well, Mr. President, it was a wonderful convenshun while it lasted, and considerin' that we dident do nothin' for a week, it sure lasted.

This is your unemployed deligate. I have took pen in hand to tell you what I learnt about our U. S. government whilst livin' through 2 convenshuns, as follows:

1—Both the Democrat and Republican convenshuns has been hard on our constatituion, especially the backside of it.

2—Us Americans is real trustful folks, when both partys calls each other a liar, we like to believe they are both right.

3—Good times is back again, if you can get on the government payroll and get some.

4—A convenshun is a thing where you can shake the hand of all the well-known faces in the U. S., except the face of the well-known forgotten man.

5—When it comes to nomanatin' presidents, a 25-c tin horn sounds as good as a $25 brass horn, if blew loud enuff in your ear.

Well, lookin' back on our week in Filadelphia, I am glad to tell you that it was just like a all-day night club. I hope the U. S. people stayed home from the movies to hear us, and I hope they got the kind of song and dance they was expectin'.

As fer the elektric end of our convenshun we had better loud speakers than the Republicans in Cleveland. Some of our leadin' loud speakers was as follows:

Sen. Robinson Sen. Barkley and Mr. Farley.

But, I was askin' one of them tough newspaper men how he liked our show, and he says, "Lousy, it's the only musical comedy I ever seen where they didn't bring the hero into the plot till the tail end of the last ack."

Well, Mr. Roosevelt the deligates is all back in their own hotel room fer a change. They are packin' up to buy their way out of Filadelphia. One of them was yellin' fer a G man just now, they give him his hotel bill and he thought they was holdin' him for ransom.

In closeing, I learnt a lot about sex. The female sex is what I mean, they was a lot thicker than the males at our Democrat convenshun. By golly, every other man you run into was a lady. And how them lady deligates could yell. They showed where the poet was right when he says the female of the speshies is more deafenin' than the male.

Well, it just goes to show that the female sex has stolen our pants and went into polatics with them. But, as fer me personel, my wife is still pretty dumb on government so I think we got to put more polatics in our ladies before we put more ladys in our polatics.

Well, Mr. Pres the next letter will be wrote from my uncle's flivver. Me, my wife Mabel and our 2 kids is goin' on a campaign tour of the U. S. So good by till next week, Mr. President, I will see you in my uncle's flivver.

"Your unemployed deligate
"W. NORMAN."

ROOSEVELT IN BID TO LEHMAN

Enroute with President Roosevelt to Hyde Park, N. Y., June 27 (US)—Thrilled with the greatest public demonstration of his career, President Roosevelt on his way to Hyde Park tonight tackled the first major problem of his re-election campaign.

Aboard the special train taking him from Franklin Field, Philadelphia, where he formally accepted the unanimous renomination of the Democratic National convention, the President exerted the full power of his personality on Gov. Lehman of New York in the hope of accomplishing what all others have failed—convincing the Governor he must run for re-election for the good of the party.

The Governor and Mrs. Lehman accompanied the President, Mrs. Roosevelt and other members of the Roosevelt family to Hyde Park on the train. The New York governor will have breakfast with the President tomorrow morning and it was reported in high quarters that an important announcement may be forthcoming then.

Curley Boom in 1940 Starts

Mrs. Louis McHenry Howe of Fall River, widow of the President's former secretary, and Michael McGrath of Salem were on the committee to notify the President of his nomination.

Representing Massachusetts on the vice-president notification committee were James Roosevelt and Miss Lucy Hickey of Holyoke.

TOO MUCH TALK

Together with others whose duties required them to be present at all sessions, they were surfeited with oratory, the purpose of which was to make the convention last as long as possible so that Philadelphia might cash in to the full on its convention guarantee.

Joseph McGrath today attended his first session of the new Democratic national committee as national committeeman.

Many of the delegates and friends of the delegates from the various states started for home today before the session nominating the vice-president. There seemed to be little interest in the President's acceptance speech, the last performance in what has been looked upon more or less as a three-ring circus.

Senator Walsh departed for Washington immediately after the adoption of the platform by the convention. He had a large part in the drafting of that document. The Senator expects to spend the summer months at his home in Clinton.

The Massachusetts delegation has seen nothing of Senator Coolidge since the second day of the convention.

Up to that time he stuck close to the Massachusetts men and women. As a member of the rules committee, burdened with the issue of abrogating the traditional two-thirds rule on nominations, Senator Coolidge was caught between the divergent opinions of Senator Walsh and Governor Curley.

Originally Coolidge wanted to placate the national administration and vote for abrogation. Walsh was against it and it appeared that a majority of the delegation backed Walsh. Coolidge therefore voted against abrogation only to find that Governor Curley was for a majority rule. As the governor controlled the Massachusetts delegation, his decision was of course respected by its members.

The Massachusetts contingent, or what is left of them, will plan to arrive in Boston on Sunday around 5 p. m., leaving Philadelphia on the Colonial express to which additional parlor cars will be attached for their convenience.

The Governor declared that he desired to get to Boston to prepare for the final and closing rounds on Beacon Hill with the Republican machine, headed by Speaker Leverett Saltonstall, whom he termed "the rich boy who decided he wouldn't play any longer and took the balls and bats home."

Damon Runyon Says;

Roosevelt Words Toned Down

Record Crowd Expected More Fight Talk

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service)

Franklin Field, Philadelphia, June 27—President Franklin D. Roosevelt, in amiable speech to a crowd of 120,000 on the University of Pennsylvania's football battleground, tonight, says to the Democarcy that notifies him and Vice-President John Nance Garner of their renomination for the presidency and vice-presidency:

"I accept the commission you have tendered me. I join with you. I am enlisted for the duration of the war."

It is a comparatively short speech, not over 2000 words.

It is an invitation to one and all to come and join him and play the game with him.

He thanks everybody for the help they have given him. He talks for a moment as if the rescue is all over in America, then adds:

"But I cannot with candor tell you that all is well with the world. Clouds of suspicion, tides of ill-wind and intolerance gather darkly in many places."

ROAR A WELCOME

The President's mother, Mrs. Sarah Delano Roosevelt, 81 years of age, but as sprightly as a woman half her years, sits near the speaker's stand listening to her son. His wife is there also, his four sons, James, Elliott, John and Franklin, Jr., and his daughter, Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Dahl Boettiger.

A great roar of human voices greets him as he stands under a great pagoda of silver gray, draped with flags, flanked by pictures of the great Democratic Presidents of the past.

The sounds boil up out of the concrete grater in greater volume than any football game ever produced here. The Democratic men and women from all over the United States, who, closed their five-day convention this afternoon with the renomination of Vice-President Garner as Mr. Roosevelt's running-mate, rise to their leader.

Mr. Garner is here with the President and he, too, is formally notified of the honor conferred upon him by the democracy. The spectators in the lowering stands rise with the delegates and cheer the President. The sky overhead is clear when the President begins speaking. A gorgeous half moon is shining above the field, adding its light to the glare of the Kliegs.

MODIFICATION SURPRISE

President Roosevelt comes by special train fro Washington and moves through police-lined streets to the Stadium which is in West Philadelphia surrounded by the various halls of learning of the University of Pennsylvania.

From a potential flop in the matter of attendance early in the evening with a heavy rain splattering the first arrivals, the notification meeting turns out to be one of the biggest meetings in political history. It is trimmed with all kinds of music from Grand Opera to the latest Harlem low-down.

It brings out the big Democrats from all over the country to pay tribute to the "New Deal" chieftain. They listen somewhat surprised at his moderation. Some of them have been expecting a fierce thumping. They find the President in benign, kindly mood though there is no mistaking that the cry wih him on his "New Deal" theories is still forward. But he would like to have all the folks come right along with him.

IN PERFECT FORM

The President is never in better speaking form. His voice, always magnificent and appealing when heard via the loud speaker, reaches every corner of the huge stadium and he makes all his points with tremendous oratorical effect.

He is frequently interrupted by applause. The crowd, partly made up of citizens of this Republican Philadelphia, loved his references to the city of Brotherly Love as a good place for a declaration of freedom.

He gesticulates occasionally with his left hand as he reads his speech from a manuscript on the pulpit at which he stands. He rarely fumbles with a word. His diction is excellent and he rolls right through. He is a tremendous relief after the pondrous wind-jamming of the convention speakers.

An Indian in full regalia stands close to the stand waving his feathered war bonnet when he likes something in the speech.

CROWD WITH HIM

The crowd enjoys the President's references to the "economic Royalists." Some had been looking for more of an old-fashioned rabble housing from their leader but they are content with anything he says.

As a matter of fact Mr. Roosevelt's speech probably sounds much better than it reads. He can bring out phrases that seem temperate enough in print in a manner that makes them suggest dynamite.

He is a great orator, make no error there—perhaps the greatest the radio has yet produced. He has adapted his voice to the mikes while others are still merely sawing the air. This has been his convention and this is his meeting and he envelopes it with the magic of his presence and his voice. His words are in spirit the words of the "New Deal."

BISHOP TO GET EVERETT CASES ON CITY FUNDS

Solicitor Bares Discrepancies of $8955 in Audit; Work of City Constables Scored

Discrepancies of $8955.05 in Everett city funds as disclosed in an audit by the State Division of Accounts and criticizing the work of 11 former constables will be called to the attention of District Attorney Warren L. Bishop of Middlesex county.

This was the statement made to the Sunday Advertiser yesterday by Attorney Morris T. Silverstein, city solicitor of the City of Everett. Silverstein was studying the report made public by Theodore N. Waddell, director of the State Division of Accounts, which made the audit.

Silverstein said that his first step will be to notify the various surety companies by which the 11 criticized constables were bonded, informing them formally of the report of the state.

"I shall also notify these firms that the matter will be turned over to the district attorney of Middlesex County," Silverstein said. "As a fact," he added, "it is the ordinary procedure and were it not done it would be compromising a felony which in itself is a crime."

While Everett officials were reticent in regard to the report, it was said that $8955 discrepancies in no way involve the present administration headed by Mayor Frank E. Lewis. Mayor Lewis could not be reached but it was said by friends:

"The mayor is going to take certain action that only the mayor can take."

What this action would be no one would venture an opinion.

It was charged in the report that it was the practice of the tax collector to give a list of persons in tax arrears and that the constables charged taxpayers 50 cents for warrants which were not issued although required by law. It is also charged that receipts were given for partial tax payments for which the law does not provide and that in some cases excessive fees were charged.

Vice-Presidential Nominee Vows Fair Fight

By FRED PERKINS

Manchester, N. H., June 27—You couldn't imagine Republican Vice-Presidential nominee Frank Knox winning a political campaign by kissing babies and handing out cigars.

But it was easy, today, to be impressed by the sandy-haired, square-shouldered ex-Rough Rider and ex-A. E. F. artilleryman, when he stoked his pipe, leaned forward in his chair and promised:

"We're going to call the New Deal bluff. We're going to demonstrate, in the next few months, the efficacy of a kind of campaign which has never before been possible.

"We're going to use modern, scientific news-gathering and news-disseminating methods to take the voters behind the scenes, let them know—and see—for themselves what is being done not only at Washington but all along the national political front.

"We're going to use, to the fullest, the three great agencies at our disposal, the press, the radio—and sound photography!

"We're going to be able to give the public what amounts practically to television.

"Thanks to technical progress, much of which has been accomplished within the past four years, we are going to be able to make this—perhaps for the first time in American history—a campaign in which it won't be possible to promise the farmer one thing, the industrial worker another, the manufacturer a third, all without ever letting the left hand know what the right hand is doing.

"We're going to explode the New Deal bubble with the hot cigar-tip of hard fact!"

PIPE ADDICT

Himself a pipe addict, not a cigar addict, Colonel Knox was well wreathed in an oracular cloud of smoke by the time he had thus far forecast his version of the Republican battle plan.

Scene of the interview, given exclusively to the Boston Sunday Advertiser and Boston Evening American, was the book-lined study of the tree-shaded, red-brick Knox residence on North Union street.

FRANK KNOX and Mrs. Knox enjoy their Manchester home summer and winter, although he misses a great deal of the latter season because of his newspaper editorial duties. Mrs. Knox spends almost the whole year there.

The Knox "summer home," this big, livable Manchester house is frequently called in the news dispatches.

But Mrs. Knox is more often here than in Chicago where her husband must make his business headquarters because of his ownership-publishership of the Chicago Daily News.

RETURNS OFTEN

And to Manchester, summer or winter, whenever he is able, Colonel Knox always comes. Here he hunts and camps and fishes and rides and plays golf and here he talks over old times with his former newspaper associates, the men who were shoulder to shoulder with him in the long, lean years when he and they and one or the other of his then struggling journalistic properties were fighting for economic survival.

"Summer home"?

Don't you believe it!

For all of his fondness for sports, however, there's nothing of the county squire or of the "horsey set" about Colonel Knox, even on vacation.

WELL DRESSED

His well-pressed suit was of hard-fabric gray. His socks and shoes were black. His white shirt had a fine, blue pin-stripe. He had not discarded his vest, although the morning was warm. His tie was an inconspicuous fore-in-hand.

You wouldn't guess, to look at Frank Knox, that he ever charged up San Juan hill with 'Teddy' Roosevelt's hard-riding, hard-fighting Spanish war volunteers or that, as a commanding officer of an A. E. F. ammunition train, he ever brought high explosive shells to batteries of the line by dint of inspiring weary men and exhorting balky mules.

Yet, when Vice-Presidential Nominee Knox gets to talking politics, it's not so hard to visualize Rough Rider Knox, Artilleryman Knox, Knox the man who twice put his country's need ahead of his personal safety and his personal interests.

VOICE OF AUTHORITY

Nor is it hard to be convinced that when Newspaper Editor and Publisher Knox talks about newly developed technique in campaign publicity and campaign reporting he's talking with well-earned authority.

If it's true that unvarnished facts—facts that speak louder than any orator's most polished rhetoric—can discredit New Deal claims and pave the way for a Republican victory this coming November, then Veteran Journalist Frank Knox ought to know how to gather [illegible] vote.

Knox [illegible] campaign. He'll do [illegible]. He [illegible] there fight [illegible].

Deception's End At Hand, He Declares

HIS FORECAST

Significant, therefore, seem the following forecasts:

"Conditions have changed both in business and in politics since the P. T. Barnum era," Colonel Knox said today. "It is becoming increasingly hard to fool any of the people any of the time.

"Even since the presidential election of four years ago, remarkable strides have been made in the technique of acquainting the rank and file of citizens with details of daily events which interest or affect them.

"I think our newspapers, by and large, today do a better and fairer job of reporting politics—and I say this although I know well that the New Deal administration, so called, has built up at enormous expense one of the greatest propaganda machines in history.

"Use of radio in politics has been enormously developed and extended since 1932.

NO PERSONALITIES

"The time is past, I believe, when one persuasive voice or one artificially built-up radio 'personality' can hope to sway the electorate effectively.

"Everybody has a radio today. Everybody can hear what any or all of the principal campaign speakers are saying. The words of one can be weighed against the words of another.

"No candidate today dares promise one thing to one section of the country and the opposite to another section of the country.

"Kissing babies and handing out cigars has no longer a part in state or national campaigning.

"We're getting down to facts. We're getting to a place where the man with a vote wants to know what he's voting for.

TIRED OF DREAMING

"There's nothing like soaring tax rates and soaring living costs to bring the orators down to earth.

"I believe the American people are sick and tired of day dreaming on an empty stomach.

"They want to know what's going on behind the scenes at Washington and elsewhere. They want to know when, if ever, promises of the past four years are going to begin paying dividends.

"It seems to me that the coming election can best be won by putting the cards on the table.

"Bluffs are going to be called.

"The power of the demagogue and the dictator and the political hypnotist has always rested on ability of each to segregate his own hand-picked audience.

"Each little group was cajoled into line.

"Each section of the country was arrayed against each other section. Prejudice and selfishness were exploited skillfully and unscrupulously.

"But modern science is making old fashioned campaign methods obsolete. No crowd will gather at the village cross roads to hear a flying squadron of arm waving orators. It's too easy to sit right at home by the radio and listen to the 'big shots.'

"But the 'big shots,' now, have to watch their words. No single leader, however presumptuous, dares try to be all things to all men.

"Propaganda is increasingly difficult, because one news-disseminating agency checks up on another. Press and radio, each fulfilling a seperate function, supplement and correct each other.

"Newest of all our technical achievements in the field of putting world facts before the public is the transmission of photographs by sound.

CAN SEE CANDIDATES

"We haven't television yet, but we have a close approximation of it, with news pictures being flashed almost instantaneously across the continent by telephone and by radio.

"Voters can see their candidates as well as hear them. The eyes can detect insincerity, hypocrisy, even when the ears cannot.

"It won't do, now, for a prominent speaker, travelling with his own little entourage of press agents, fictitiously to report "great ovations" in small towns where he appears on a pullman car's observation platform.

"The camera will catch him in his lie.

"If his audience included only a handful of gum-chewing depot loafers, the singing wires will have photographic proof of the fiasco in a hundred newspaper offices within the hour.

"The truth was always mighty.

"But this year, as never before, we have facilities for bringing the truth home to the voters.

"It's high time the New Deal bluff was called.

"We're prepared to play them!"

In tomorrow's Boston Evening American, Colonel Frank Knox, Republican nominee for the vice-presidency, will comment on the New Deal's "bid to perpetuate itself" by abrogation of the Democratic National Convention's long established "two-thirds" rule.

MAYOR BATES ENTERS RACE FOR CONGRESS

Six Other Candidates for A. Piatt Andrew's Job Quit as Salemite Files Papers

Salem, June 27—Something of a sensation in Republican political circles in Essex county came today when Mayor George J. Bates of Salem took out nomination papers for election to the sixth congressional seat made vacant by the death of Congressman A. Piatt Andrew.

Almost concurrently with Mayor Bates' formally announcing himself as a candidate, six other Republican candidates [illegible].

3 STAY IN FIGHT

Three candidates [illegible] remained in the fight. They are [illegible] of Marblehead and former member of the Senate and the House; [illegible] W. Morris, wealthy shoe manufacturer and former mayor of Newburyport, and Ernest [illegible] of Danvers who for 25 years has been secretary to the congressman in the sixth district.

Former Mayor Morris [illegible] was expected would withdraw as he had been quoted recently as not wanting to contest the seat with Bates. Andrew J. "Bossy" Gillis of Newburyport surrendered his former hopes of being a candidate.

WILL AID G. O. P.

It was said that state and national Republican officials feel that Bates would aid their cause in Essex County generally.

Mayor Bates will enter the fight with a long record of useful public service. For eight years a mem- on the important committee on mu- ber of the Legislature, he served nicipal finance. Later he was president of the Massachusetts Mayors' Club and several times led a corps of mayors to Washington to demand higher tariffs and better protection for the local shoe and textile industries.

Lovely Color (Similar to Nature's Own) For Your Gray Hair

Pure, Harmless CANUTE WATER will Re-Color it—Safely
20 years without injury to a single user

Canute Water is a pure, colorless and odorless liquid of wonderful properties. This crystal-clear fluid, when applied to gray, faded or streaked hair, will again make it appear youthful, lustrous and uniform in color.

Easy to Use

Because of its safety, cleanliness and dependability, you can use Canute Water alone, in the privacy of your own room. No previous experience is necessary. You simply wet the hair with it and allow to dry.

Speedy Action

It requires between 1 and 3 applications to re-color the hair to the proper shade. The treatment can be completed in a single day.

And when the hair has once been re-colored, a single treatment, given only once a month, is sufficient to keep it that way. No more attention is necessary.

Results Amazing

Canute Water is neither sticky nor greasy. It leaves the hair clean and natural to the touch. There's not even a suggestion of "dye". Neither is it just a hair "darkener". Canute Water imparts a color similar to nature's very own.

Even your most intimate friends will be unable to distinguish the re-colored hair from the natural. And the new color remains in the hair, permanent against sun, air, salt-water and shampooing.

Action is Positive

No matter what has caused your grayness, Canute Water will positively overcome it. There are no exceptions.

Even if you have used some other hair coloring, it will be a revelation to you to see what Canute Water can do for your hair.

The time of day or the state of the weather makes no difference when using Canute Water. Apply it at your convenience. And since it does not alter the texture of your hair, you may curl, wave or set it — or get a permanent — as usual.

Inexpensive

Even a very modest purse can spare the trifling cost of keeping the hair lovely with Canute Water. A bottle contains enough for six average applications.

So, if you are still young—if you still care what others think — and if you are not quite ready to be classed with the "old folks" or the "has beens" get a bottle right away. It will solve your problem so completely that you, yourself, will be astonished.

OLD HARVARD OUTFIT

Student Wore Toga; It's in Museum

What the well dressed Harvard man wore a hundred years ago—a fancy, colored calico "toga" trimmed with lace—was revealed for the first time today when the only known remaining example of the strange garb was placed on display in the Harvard University Library.

The garment, which could be red green, or blue as the student desired, and which resembles the modern smock, was the student costume at the time of the Harvard bicentennial exercises in 1836. It is being shown as part of a Tercentenary exhibit of rare, early American books and manuscripts which will continue at the Harvard library throughout the summer.

The students wore the "toga" to informal exercises such as morning prayers, and while studying or relaxing in the taverns of Harvard Square. Copied from the traditional "short gowns" of Oxford University, the Harvard "togas" were first introduced into America about 1825 and passed out of fashion about 1850.

NAZI PLOTS ON DANZIG STIR UP LEAGUE CHIEFS

Move to Balk 'Hitler Coup'; Haile Selassie Refuses to Relinquish Absentee Throne

Geneva, June 27 (US)—League of Nations circles were startled tonight by news of a rumored Nazi plot to seize the free city of Danzig, while fugitive Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia tossed another bombshell into Geneva's lap by refusing to renounce his absentee throne.

The news from Danzig provoked a series of hasty conferences here as attention of the delegates to the League Council meeting became suddenly divided between the question of [illegible] against Italy and the newly-developing crisis at the internationalized Baltic seaport.

CLIMAX TO RIOTING

Joseph Beck, Poland's foreign minister, was closeted for hours in conference with French Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos and was preparing also to discuss the Danzig problem with British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, chairman of the League Council.

It was believed Beck is seeking [illegible] Nazi coup that may be attempted in Danzig so that the harbor may retain its status as a free city under league governance.

Reports from Danzig told of rumors that Nazi elements there are preparing to issue a proclamation declaring the free city to be an independent state. The reports climaxed months of disorderly clashes in the free city between Nazi and League adherents.

STRENGTHENS HITLER

A Nazi coup in Danzig, if successful, would enormously strengthen Chancellor Hitler of Germany on his eastern frontier and, contrariwise, would dangerously weaken the position of Poland. Danzig lies vitally close to Gdynia at the head of the Polish Corridor which is Poland's only outlet to the sea.

As the council went into the second day of its current session, league prestige suffered another setback when Nicaragua following the lead of other latin American nations, formally served notice of its resignation from the Genexa family. Under procedure prescribed in the covenant Nicaragua's resignation will take effect two years from today.

600 Zonta Women Urgee World Peace

Resolutions seeking the promotion of world peace were adopted during the final session yesterday of the [illegible] annual convention of the Zonta International held at the New Ocean House, Swampscott.

The final day session was attended by more than 600 delegates representing all parts of the United States and Canada.

Miss Dora Neun, of Rochester, N. Y., was elected president, Mrs. Jean Robson, of Ottawa, Canada, first vice-president; Miss Doris Dell, of Everett, Wash., second vice-president and Mrs. Elizabeth Kraus, of Chicago treasurer.

The resolution asking for the organization's endorsement of world peace was introduced by Miss Ada Stovall-Lothian, of Boston.

Auto Races Death With Boy in Blast

Fall River, June 27—A 25-mile dash over the road from Little Compton, R. I., to save the life of James Charves, 7, after he had been seriously wounded by explosion of percussion caps, brought some hope for the lad at Truesdale Hospital here late tonight.

The boy was playing with a power lawnmower in a plot of land near his home no Burbank avenue in Little Compton, when the explosions occurred in rapid succession.

James suffered loss of two fingers on the right hand, a portion of the right thumb and fracures of almost all fingers on both hands. A missle pierced the abdomen. The boy's name was placed on the danger list.

Notable Society Girls Are Brides As a Climax to June Weddings

Miss Waters of Brookline Wed; Miss Fuller in Nuptials

One of society's most attractive weddings took place in St. Paul's Church, Brookline, yesterday when Miss Sally Waters, daughter of Mrs. Bertram Gordon Waters of Brookline and the late Mr. Waters, became the bride of William E. Richardson, son of the C. Tiffany Richardsons of New York.

The noted clergyman married Jean's father and mother, and the charming old church in which yesterday's ceremony took place was built by the bride's grandfather, the late Alfred Dwight Gleason, and her great-uncle, Charles Whitney Gleason, in memory of her great-grandfather, Hon. FOURTH BANDIT HUNTED AS PAL DIES, 1 DYING

Third Man Arrested as Express Car Holdup Suspect in $19,000 Robbery Try

Lawrence June 27—With one bandit dead, another reported dying and a third suspect under arrest, police tonight sought one more member of the gang that attempted last Tuesday to hold up a $19,000 money shipment as it was being transferred to an express car at the Boston & Maine Railway station.

Police Inspector Timothy J. O'Brien whose accurate shooting brought down two of the holdup men was also responsible for the identification of the suspect a 23-year-old youth whom police identified as Robert Holmes of Barton st. West End.

Holmes has a police record dating back to 1931 when he was first arrested and fined for assault and battery on a police officer. In May 1931 he was sentenced to Concord reformatory for assault with intent to rob.

Frank Tartaglia 32 of Medford, died at the Lawrence General hospital today from a bullet O'Brien sent into his spine as he struggled with Bank Guard Abbott Corkum the other hero of the attempted holdup.

John J. (Connecticut Jack) Coughlin alias McNamara believed by police to have been the leader of the gang sank into a coma this afternoon. Doctors said death was a matter of hours. A bullet from O'Brien's gun struck him in the stomach.

Both men were ex-convicts who had completed terms for robbery.

Patrolman Leo Devlin of Boston was responsible for the arrest of the latest suspect. Devlin a native of Lawrence was walking past the Bay State Merchants National bank on the day of the holdup. After the attempted robbery, which was directed particularly against a money shipment from the bank, Devlin told Lawrence police he had seen Holmes near the bank and talked to him. The suspect's arrest by Sgt. William Bonner of the Boston police followed.

Tartaglia died after hours of agony pleading:

"Please help me. Don't let me die."

5 Airmail Suits Settled by Farley

Washington, June 27 (INS)—Settlement of five suits instituted by airmail operators whose contracts were abruptly canceled two years ago was announced today by Postmaster General Farley.

The suits had asked damages of $8,841,094. The settlements were affected when Farley agreed to pay the companies $601,511.

Farley's admission that compromises have been reached in five of the suits growing out of the spectacular contract cancellations came immediately following disclosure that this course had been decided upon after a careful study by the Department of Justice.

Ten more suits asking approximately $7,000,000 are still pending in the United States Court of Claims. It was strongly indicated tonight every effort will be made to compromise these also to spare the administration and Farley, particularly, any embarrassment through a court review of the action terminating the agreements.

Bride Asks to Fly Ocean With Ace

He said that by flying 40,000 feet in the air he can develop a speed of 500 miles an hour with his special Lockheed Supercharger and hopes to cover the shore to shore distance of about 2000 miles in five hours.

Mrs. Chamberlin insisted that she having a pilot's license accompany him on his trip. Chamberlin mumbled something about weight being the deciding factor in whether he takes a passenger or not. The bride said that in such an event she could diet.

They will leave tomorrow for St. Louis where the flyer operates a transport service.

WPA Man Jailed; 'Perjury' Is Probed

Art Figures Tell Age-Old Story

Miniature People Play Roles in Life of Saviour

Probably the most unusual and ingenious exhibition ever held here will open next Tuesday at Horticultural Hall, where, for the first time in New England, a miniature reproduction of every important incident in the life of Christ will be shown.

Amazingly lifelike and realistic, the Holy Land exhibit traces the entire course of the Saviour, from the humble stable at Bethlehem to the tomb at Calvary.

So that all may see fully the remarkable reproduction of Palestine and the reenactment of the incidents of the life of Jesus three [illegible] have been built around the exhibit.

The one nearest the large realistic exhibit is for children. Another, a foot higher parallels this, and a third two feet higher [illegible] the second.

REAL FOLIAGE

The brothers Joseph and Salvatore Gatti who spent most of their lives building this true-to-life model have just completed setting it up, a week's task.

It is remarkable. There are tiny trees in themselves, marvels of realistic reproduction. Some of the miniature evergreens bear the foliage of their real counterparts in the Holy Land. Actually this everlasting foliage is living after 11 years.

The lighting effects about the exhibit make it seem as though a spectator had been carried back 1900 years over the three seas between here and Palestine and is really viewing the life and times of Jesus.

LIFELIKE FASHION

The mechanical effects are similarly remarkable. There is the actual reproduction of the stable at Bethlehem, where Christ was born, with the shepherds and their flocks listening to the message of heavenly choirs.

All of the figures are tiny but true reproductions of those they represent and they move in lifelike fashion rather than the jerky fashion of marionettes.

The exhibit will be here for only a limited time, and for the first time in New England. Proceeds of the nominal admission fees will be shared with the host, a Sunday Advertiser [illegible] Evening American Christmas Basket Fund.

An analysis of Krol's vital organs made by Dr. William F. Boos state toxicologist showed there was more than a grain of an unnamed poison in the body.

The death of Krol was ascribed at the time to a fall down stairs. Two policies on his life each for $1000 were held by non-relatives and the insurance company which issued them recently brought suit in an attempt to have them void[ed].

Other details of Dr. Boos' report will be presented next Tuesday at an inquest on Krol's death Moriarty said.

Notes of a New Yorker in Hollywood

WHILE PIERRE BORETTI, our nurse, was watching Shirley Temple and Stepin Fetchit go through the last scene of "The Bowery Princess" over on the 20th Century-Fox lot the other afternoon, Stepin almost fell from his interlocutor's chair while asleep . . . The laziest man in the movies reminded Nurse Boretti of his favorite lazy man anecdote . . . It goes this way: A Bowery bum was dozing against a lamp-post. His hands were in his trouser pockets. A fly lit on his nose. The lazy bum didn't even open his orbs. He merely blew upward to shoo the fly off . . . A passerby who noticed the incident approached the bum and said: "Show me a lazier thing than that and I'll give you five dollars!" . . . "Okay," yawned the bum, "put it in my pocket."

The column's unmarried daughter of 9, Walda, was Shirley's luncheon guest . . . They talked and talked between "takes" and had themselves quite a time . . . Later at home Walda was asked if she had a pleasant afternoon . . . "Oh, it was a lot of fun!" she said. "Shirley is very sweet. She's just like other little girls, Daddy, she says 'yeah!' "

Thumbnail description of Dorothy Parker: "Mrs. Wilson Mizner" . . . Moviegoers will be delighted with the song "When Did You Leave Heaven?" in the picture soon due: "Sing, Baby, Sing" . . It was inspired by that howl in "Follow the Fleet" when a gob sidled up to a lovely looker and cooed: "Hullo, how wuz Heaven when you left?" . . . Capsule Criticism in one of the news mags: "Ham actors long to be Napoleon. Mr. Rains makes Napoleon a ham actor" . . . Eddie Cantor, just back from the Hawaiian Islands, raved about its charm and magic. "I'm definitely a Honolunatic!" he said . . . Reader's Digest offers: "Silence is Golden, but sometimes it is yellow" . . . And: "It used to be father who gave the bride away. Now it's Walter Winchell."

"Burning City" is Stephen Vincent Benet's new volume of poems. "Litany for Dictatorships" is a pithy indictment of despots. Farrar and Rhinehart publish it. Also fine in that book is "Metropolitan Nightmare" . . . When the movie, "Nobody's Fool," which stars Edward Everett Horton and others, plays Oshkosh, a little lady (who plays only a bit in it) will be starred over the cast. The ads will read: "Diana Gibson of Oshkosh" in "Nobody's Fool" . . . Irony: "New Deal" has "AL" in it . . . Hollywood, like Broadway, is where a friend turns as quickly as your back does.

The car that knocks you down and runs over you in Hollywood usually has a card on the windshield reading: "Drive Sanely" . . The owners of Oriental places spend thousands of dollars to create an "atmosphere" with lanterns, pagodas, idols and prints, and then put up a 24-sheet reading "Beer!" . . . Producers of "horse operas" refer to them as "outdoor romances" . . . Gail Patrick is the most photo'd girl in Hollywood. She is considered ideal for fashions . . . Irving Thalberg, his severest critics will concede, means more to the motion picture industry than it does to him. He represents its class, intelligence and cunning . . . The chief reason why movie criticism out here is flat is that most of the critics accept the stars' invitations to their homes.

Mr. W. Corum, the N. Y. Journal's sports sentinel, scolds this column for a recent comment on a fight a-delight . . . Mr. Corum imagined that our use of the word "legend" implied that a story (he prepared on an old gentleman dropping dead in Schmeling's dressing room) was fiction . . . Mr. Corum offers to wager us $1,000 for $1 that it really happened . . . Anyone who reads our wordage with any regularity would know that we used the words legend and story almost interchangeably . . . We sincerely trust that the explanation will heal our confrere's wounds . . . He remarks, too, that he has too much pride to quarrel in print with fellow newspapermen . . .

This column has never quarreled in print or out of it with NEWSPAPERMEN.

Speaking of feuds, one of the better controversies was the war between George Jean Nathan and Alec Woollcott. It lasted a decade . . . Burton Rascoe and Lyle Crichton's current argument is the most fascinating reading in their respective publications. The N. Y. Sun and the old N. Y. Post heckled each other delightfully for a long time . . The late Percy Hammond, who had a good deal of pride, openly tifted with Fred Donaghey, also a Chicago critic...Westbrook Pegler knows that a good controversy makes zippy reading...Leonard Lyons doesn't appear to care a fig whether a man is on a newspaper or not when he sincerely feels the one he attacks has it coming to him . . William Randolph Hearst and Joseph Pulitzer swapped sabers in their respective gazettes for many years. The June issue of the American Mercury is the best in months. H. L. Mencken and Upton Sinclair continue their tempestuous [illegible] in the forum dept. . . It is getting more and more interesting. They've finally reached the stage where they're calling each other names.

Sir Patrick Quinn, the Scotland Yard ace who died the other day, was one of the few coppers, perhaps the only one, who was knighted for sleuthing.. Maybe he was honored for one of the saddest observations ever to come from a constable. It happened when he rounded up a mess of German spies in London during the war and some [illegible] Sir Patrick quipped that saying [illegible]

It doesn't seem possible that [illegible] the Democratic [illegible] but what [illegible] think of newspapers that gave space to [illegible] Michael T. [illegible] was sacked as captain of the [illegible] Aces bridge team? . . . Two colored ex-boxers called the turn on their own brown brother . . . Jack Johnson said Joe's previous victims (Baer, Carnera et al.) licked themselves via panic. And Harry Wills predicted that Louis would be a [illegible] for a [illegible] as [illegible] Harlem [illegible] . . . Ralph [illegible] of the [illegible] Armory was arrested at Westfield, Mass. for driving a car after his license had been [illegible] . . . He pleaded [illegible] of Pres. Roosevelt [illegible] he was he flouted traffic laws, he could qualify as a [illegible]

MASSACHUSETTS STATE HOUSE

OLD NORTH CHURCH

FANEUIL HALL

Boston Cordially Welcomes the Advertising Federation of America

You will find Boston a city of particular interest to members of your craft because it combines, in a center of modern culture, the appeal of historic shrines, dating back over three hundred years, with the progressive tempo of a prosperous municipality.

During your visit you will have the opportunity to visit shrines famous in history . . . Bunker Hill Monument . . . the Old North Church . . . Faneuil Hall, "Cradle of Liberty" . . . Paul Revere's Home . . . the Granary Burying Ground . . . King's Chapel . . . the Old State House . . . Concord Bridge . . . and scores of other places close to the heart of every patriotic American.

For your hours of recreation you will find ocean beaches . . . lakes and country within convenient access by train, trolley, bus or motor car.

Your participation in a profession which has contributed so signally to the progress of a great nation, will lend added interest to these facts about Boston:

It is America's fourth largest market . . . the world's largest wool center . . . the world's largest center and market of the shoe and leather industries . . . the most important fish port in the Western Hemisphere . . . trading center of one of the richest industrial areas in the world . . . second port in the United States in volume of ocean-borne traffic . . . second in volume of imports . . . has over 25,000 retail stores and 5200 manufacturing establishments . . . nearly 30,000 students are annually registered in five Metropolitan Boston colleges . . . in brief . . . a city that provides important market advantages which everyone engaged in advertising should know and understand.

It is hoped that your visit to Boston will bring added progress to a splendid profession and give you an enduringly favorable impression of a great city that is going forward with America to new heights of prosperity

SOCIALITE JURY READY TO APPROVE VACATION ATTIRE

A complete and perfect wardrobe for vacation days will be selected Tuesday at the Fashion Congress session in the Ritz-Carlton Hotel.

A distinguished jury of socialites will determine what the well dressed week-ender will pack in her summer festivities. Mrs. Joseph suitcase before starting out for Woods of the fashionable North Shore social front heads the list of judges.

The others who will help her select vacation clothes which are not only stylish but in good taste are Mrs. Frederick Dearborn, Mrs. Brooks Potter, Mrs. Arthur Hobson, Mrs. Richard Storey Jr., Mrs. William Russell and Mrs. Robert Harkness.

The stores and specialty shops which will exhibit clothes this week have selected with great care ensembles from their newest stock. Those which meet the patrician approval of the fashion jury will be awarded a black and silver Fashion Congress tag.

Vacation clothes which have a double or triple purpose will be featured. This trend in fashion is a special boon to week-enders who want a varied and complete wardrobe yet wish to travel lightly.

Coats designed for an evening dress often turn up this season over a spectator sports or beach costume after appearing under the stars the night before.

New travel coats with a next fall look will also be included in the week-end wardrobe of the Fashion Congress.

Evening dresses this week's session will show a swing to extremes. [illegible] now. Either they are all foamy froth or net or they are the icy slinkiness of satin.

The lovely young socialites who will model vacation clothes are: Miss Sally Scudder, Miss Frances Cove, Miss Marian Lawrence and Miss Louise Stevens.

Tear Down Homes Over High Taxes

Taxes and the costly upkeep of two Swampscott mansions will cause them to be razed by their owners and the property subdivided into building lots.

"The Arches," Atlantic avenue estate of the late Andrew W. Preston, United Fruit Company executive and "The Dorrich," home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold G. Cutler, the former Bessie Preston, have been ordered torn down.

IT'S THE BEST INVESTMENT!

The fundamental basis of ALL wealth is REAL ESTATE!

Today, home-owning is made easy by the lowest and the easiest mortgage terms in history.

How many homes have YOU paid for, MR. RENTER?

Now is the time to protect yourself against further rental increase. Prices are still low. Those who know, predict an increase in home-cost. NOW is the time to BUY. Nothing can be gained in putting it off—but regret. Act now! There is no substitute in the pride of home-ownership.

Madame Sybil stepped into the [illegible] room and when she returned she was followed by Zena and Donald Northwood, who carried the borrowed ledgers. Madame Sybil [illegible] the [illegible]. [illegible]

Blevans examined the strange array of figures and for a time said nothing. His face looked a curious green under the rays of the lamp. "I'm no accountant," he muttered, "but anybody can see these books have been tampered with. How do I know who did it? It's not in my department."

Fred Drugan laughed. "That's a sweet old alibi," [illegible] Blevans. But tell us this: why were you so hot to prosecute this poor kid you framed up on?"

"I was doing my duty, that is all," said Blevans coolly.

"There is no shortage in these accounts," cried Donald Northwood. "There never was—I can prove it now!"

"Well, if there is no shortage," demanded Blevans curtly, "why did you make these alterations in your books? You must have had some reason for it."

"That's easy," said Detective Drugan, laughing again. "He wanted to prove himself a crook, so he checked himself up short!"

"Perhaps the grand jury can figure it out," remarked Sedgcomb of the surety company. "We'll clean out your bunch of crooks at the city hall, Blevans, or you'll never get a bond from a decent company for one of your employes."

"Well, find out who the crooks are, and I'll help you," declared Blevans. "That's just what I've been trying to do. If there's no shortage, I'm glad to hear it. Come along, Martin."

"Well, why don't you serve your warrant?" challenged Drugan. "We all want to see you serve your little warrant."

Blevans burst out of the door without reply, and Detective Martin followed, slamming the door behind him.

SOMEBODY ought to go to jail for this," muttered Sedgcomb, turning the pages of another ledger. "How does your trick light do it, Madame?"

"It's an old stunt—two or three years old, anyhow," replied the fortune teller. "I saw it first at the Munich police headquarters, in Germany, as I recall. Once in every few seasons I manage to scrape up enough to take a trip over there, and see what I can pick up. This is an ultraviolet lamp, but it takes the dark filter to give you the pure actinic rays. You can write me a letter in lemon juice—or ordinary saliva, or soapy water, for that matter—between the lines of another letter. I put the letter under this ultraviolet lamp and read your invisible message. Oh, there are lots of things you can do with it."

"It's something about fluorescence and phosphorescence and vegetable and mineral matter that I can't remember," said Madame Sybil. "All I know is, the ink they used the first time set up a chemical change in the paper. The ink remover removed the ink but couldn't budge the chemical change. That dark brown line of figures is the original—the bright, shiny line is the metallic content of the new ink; it might be wiped out by ink remover, but you could never wipe out the chemical change. Why, they're reading old parchments with this lamp that were written and then erased clean a thousand years ago."

"You're a smart bird," said Sedgcomb admiringly.

"Not so smart," replied Madame Sybil bitterly. "I stood by and let that bird Blevans crook me. Where's Northwood gone?"

"Oh, he's in there with his girl," said Fred Drugan.

PERHAPS it was sheer coincidence that on the same day the newspapers announced the engagement and approaching marriage of Mr. Donald Northwood and Miss Carlotta Webster, the city attorney of Fullerton called on Madame Sybil at the Devil's Eyebrows and told her her property had been condemned.

"We had to do it, Madame Sybil," said Blevans softly, "but I took care of you. I always protect my friends. You have been useful to me and to the city. You cleared up that unfortunate mess in the comptroller's department, and we've started firing from the top—we've got a new city comptroller. And thanks to you the matter was given no harmful publicity."

"That's because I'm still busy getting the goods on you," said Madame Sybil sharply. "I'm not through—I'll tell you that. How do you mean you've taken care of me?"

"Well, I felt somewhat to blame," continued Blevans suavely, "for having influenced you to buy this property. I know, of course, what you paid for it—eighteen thousand, five hundred. Well, it happens that the appraisers appointed to fix the value at which the city will buy from you are friends of mine. They asked me what I thought it was worth and I told them I thought—" Blevans paused to light a cigar by way of punctuation—"I told them I thought about thirty-five thousand dollars."

"You did, eh?" said Madame Sybil, with a slowly widening grin. "Now aren't you sweet, Mr. Blevans?"

"Yes, I told them to hold the matter up, until I had had a talk with you. I thought perhaps you would be getting tired of a small city like Fullerton, and would like to move to a larger field. You're really too good to waste your time around here. What do you think?"

"I think," said Madame Sybil, puffing a cigarette leisurely, "that I'll go to Europe for a rest—and see what I can pick up for the good of the profession, in towns like Munich."

"Munich," murmured Mr. Blevans, "is just about as near as I want you."

[illegible]

"[illegible]," he pleaded. "[illegible] where is the entrance?"

"He [illegible] police were all about [illegible] and weary. We [illegible]. It is the end."

"[illegible]," Carter. "It can't be, just after I have found you. [illegible]"

[illegible] a face so beautiful [illegible] that he [illegible]

"[illegible]," she said [illegible] that almost [illegible]

He crushed her to him. He was trembling. For a moment he forgot [illegible] the fate that [illegible] ruthless [illegible] knowledge [illegible] against his heart that she loved him.

Her [illegible] on his, her eyes half closed. It was the end of the long trail, the end he had hoped and prayed for. They were together at last.

A rending crash brought Carter back to the present. The police had [illegible] through the [illegible] of the stairs [illegible] be in the [illegible] be leading them [illegible] on! The [illegible] detective had [illegible] ahead the moment when he would put a hand on his best friend's shoulder and say, "Monsieur [illegible], I arrest you."

[illegible] her head [illegible]

[illegible]," he said [illegible] to [illegible]. The [illegible] against the wall. A [illegible] crack had appeared [illegible]. In a flash he [illegible] throne-like chair [illegible]

[illegible] at the arm and both chair and door behind it swung out noiselessly. The crack had widened to a yard. Seizing Adrienne, he hurried her through the aperture and pulled the door closed behind him. He was just in time. At the opening appeared the rest of the [illegible] to the cellar.

Carter could hear the sound of their voices faintly. They would find the opening [illegible] there was no time to lose.

"Adrienne," he said, "where does this passage lead?"

She seemed to rouse herself.

"To another cellar at the back of this block," she said, "but the police will be there waiting."

"Perhaps [illegible] can at least try. Don't give way now, Adrienne, you who have always been so brave, so resourceful," he urged.

She smiled wanly. Under the single electric lamp that lighted the passage the oval of her face was pathetically white.

"[illegible], Armand," she said, "that scene back there seemed to have sapped all my courage, [illegible] all my will. I want [illegible] to close my eyes and rest [illegible] your arms around me."

"I know, my darling," said Carter [illegible]. "It's quite understandable. Poor [illegible]. But you must help me to get you to safety. Just this one more effort and then you can rest, I promise you."

She smiled up at him.

"It is not [illegible] that you know any [illegible], Armand? I think she died back in the cellar [illegible]. And perhaps [illegible] it is your fault. My strength went out of me, Armand, when you [illegible]."

Carter could not speak. All he could do was to hold her tight in his arms, with his face buried in her soft chestnut hair [illegible] to keep the tears back.

The American never knew how long they stood there without speaking, without movement. The yellow light shone on the narrow dreariness of the passage. It was not a setting for romance, but when have mere surroundings mattered to lovers?

Adrienne was the first to come back to the present. She sighed and lifted her head.

"Do you remember my saying that you had given me back my faith, Armand? Now you have brought back my courage. I am ready," she whispered.

Carter kissed the upturned face gently.

"If we never win through, Adrienne," he said, "I am content. My whole life up to now has not been equal to this moment with you. Come, sweetheart."

Hand in hand they picked their way along the passage for perhaps a dozen yards. Before them was a door.

"The other cellar is beyond," she whispered.

"Stay here," he said. "I'll be back in a moment."

Retracing his steps, he reached up and extinguished the sole light. He snapped on his flash and by its light rejoined Mademoiselle de Brisac before the door.

"Stay behind me," he breathed. Then his flashlight winked out and he began slowly, with infinite caution, to turn the handle of the door.

A vertical slit of light appeared. The door swung noiselessly. Carter could see half of a cellar very similar to that they had left. It was untenanted. He listened. The sound of measured footsteps reached his ear. Someone was pacing slowly up and down behind the door. He strained his ears. It was only one man, he felt sure, but he could not see.

Reaching into a pocket he found his pen-knife. Through the crack he tossed it out onto the stone floor where it fell janglingly. The footsteps stopped abruptly. There was a long pause during which the American held his breath. Then he heard steps tiptoeing to the door. The edge of a heavy boot came within his range of vision. Carter flung open the heavy door and plunged through.

There was a curse as the door struck the detective. He staggered back. The next moment Carter was upon the man like a tiger. A long right uppercut caught him on the chin and he went down in a sudden heap. He did not move. The blow, delivered with all of the American's weight behind it, had been a clean knockout.

"This door leads up to the front entrance," she said in his ear.

"There are probably two or three outside the house," he said, "but we must get out of here somehow," and pushed the door

He found himself in a dimly-lit hall. Beside the door was a narrow window

The American peered out and nodded Two men stood at the curb. Le Marteau had not exaggerated the police had been thorough

There was a stairway leading up, but Carter dismissed the idea of trying to reach the roof almost as soon as it suggested itself. Alone, he might have succeeded, but there was Adrienne to consider. He motioned her to stand where the opening door would screen her She obeyed silently

Then he opened the street door quickly. As though startled by the sight of the detectives, he slammed the door shut again and then sprang to one side

There was a rush of feet outside and the door was dashed open. A man sprang through Carter thrust out a leg and the other tripped and sprawled headlong on the floor. The American's fist shot out and the second detective sank on the door sill Carter sprang for the first man who was already scrambling to his feet, cursing

At any other time the American would have scorned to take an opponent at a disadvantage but it was no moment for sporting niceties. The detective had struggled to his knees when Carter dove at him. The two men's heads collided with a crash that made Carter see fireworks The other was hurled to the floor and lay still. Carter rose dazed to his feet and staggered to Adrienne's side

"Come," he said as he took her hand

In the doorway lay the second detective. He moaned as they slipped past and gained the sidewalk. He was coming to

Carter's head was buzzing and the buildings were doing a crazy dance as he led Mademoiselle de Brisac down the narrow street Ahead was a corner A bearded passerby stared at the pair curiously

As they approached the cross-street the American by an effort of will steadied his reeling brain If only there were a taxi in sight

And then he heard the [illegible] honk of an [illegible] horn and he saw approaching one of those decrepit vehicles that still crawl [illegible] from their [illegible] the [illegible] hours of a Paris [illegible]. To Carter it seemed the most beautiful sight he had ever [illegible]. The ancient cab wheezed to a stop at his signal

"To the Bois" he said to the Jehu who drove the life saving wreck He followed Mademoiselle de Brisac into the evil smelling interior pulled the door shut and slumped thankfully back as the [illegible] shivered and snorted and bumped slowly down the street A soft arm stole round his neck Carter's eyes closed thankfully

One Who Waited

FOR a long time neither spoke They were content to be alive and free and together The throbbing in Carter's head gradually lessened and he could think connectedly once more

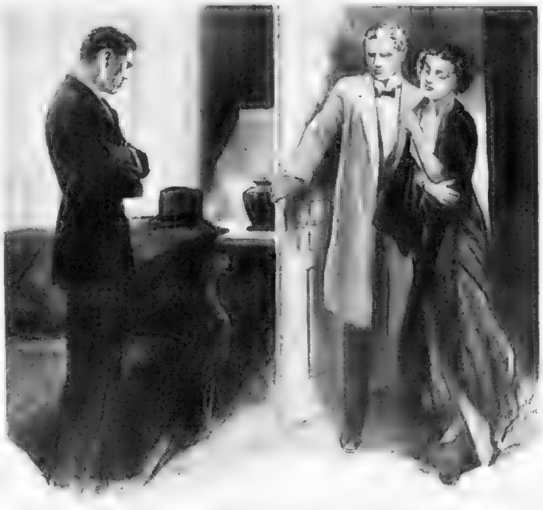
"Where are we going?" he asked suddenly

"You said the Bois" she reminded him smiling. "As well there as any other place"

"Yes, but we must think—and plan. We are safely away from the Rue des Deux Chiens but did Le Marteau tell Garcion who you were or that I was one of the Club of Nine?" He knitted his brows

"Now it is your turn to worry cheri" she said "Do you remember that a little while ago you told me to be brave that it would all come out as we wished? You see you were right!"

"But suppose Garcion has learned your identity? Where do you live?" he asked suddenly



And Then Carter's Heart Stood Still. From the Couch on Which He Had Been Lying, Rose Pierre Garcion!

She smiled a little "In the Rue Maurand," she said

"The Rue Maurand? Why, that is where I live" he cried

"Of course we are neighbors That is why I [illegible] who you were when you first joined the Club you lived there then I have often seen you Armand though you have never seen me"

[illegible] looked at her now in astonishment "No I have never seen you before tonight but I heard you once behind me at the Opera!"

"Yes cheri and you were very funny! How you clove a way through the crowd! I had to make myself very small behind a large man in a very tall hat I was afraid you might see me laughing and suspect"

"Yes, Garcion said I made a spectacle of myself," said the American ruefully

"It is cruel to twit you about it, Armand," she said softly "You forgive me?"

He pressed her hand

"I am horribly afraid cherie that from now on I am going to forgive you anything—anything at all so long as you still love me" he said

After a moment, he said, musingly

"If Garcion knows who we are he will have sent men to the Rue Maurand as soon as he is sure that we escaped It might be well to go there and spy out the ground If there are police in sight we can keep right on If not—so much the better After all, we can't ride around indefinitely in this ark. It may die very permanently at any moment."

He hailed the patriarch on the front seat. "Drive through the Rue Maurand from end to end" he said

The taxi turned a corner with a groan Ten minutes later they were running down the quiet street Carter's lodgings were soon reached He peered out cautiously. There was no one in sight. Two blocks further Mademoiselle de Brisac whispered to the American "That is my house the little one next to the corner"

"Yes and do you see those two?" He indicated two dim forms in the shadowed doorway of the house opposite

"Turn right" said Carter, and a moment later "Stop"

Getting out, he paid off the ancient pirate at the wheel He stood at the curb until the wobbling vehicle had shambled out of sight. Already dawn was in the air. In that quiet quarter nothing was stirring

"Listen, darling," he said "You cannot go to your house they are waiting for you A hotel is out of the question for you at this hour especially with no baggage The police would have you in two hours. Apparently my place is not watched You must come there—will you trust me that far?"

"Trust you?" she laughed a little musically "What do you think Armand?"

"You darling!" he said, and linking an arm in hers started down the street

They turned the corner and continued down the street that parallels the Rue Maurand A block beyond the American's apartment they turned the corner and presently were approaching his door They had met no one It was getting lighter momentarily Carter hurried her along He was in an agony of apprehension lest something should occur to jeopardize their hard won safety

Garcion too, for once seemed to have lost his tongue Doubt and embarrassment struggled for the mastery in his expressive face For a moment the silence was so intense that the rapid ticking of the saucy little gold clock on the mantel sounded like the hammering of a pneumatic riveter The far-off note of a motor horn sounded almost under the windows Carter moistened his dry lips He must say something—anything!

But it was Mademoiselle de Brisac who stepped into the breach She laughed quietly Stepping to Carter's side she laid a hand on his sleeve

[illegible] she [illegible] at Carter [illegible] and [illegible] of her voice "Don't you think you should present this gentleman? After all [illegible] You [illegible]"

The casualness of her tone [illegible] the American What a [illegible] she was He must show her that he too could control his tingling nerves

"I beg your pardon" he said [illegible] Mademoiselle [illegible] present my very good friend Pierre Garcion" He stressed the name the least bit Garcion bowed

"I am honored Mademoiselle," he said "and Gran I hope you will accept my apologies for being here so unexpectedly"

"Why not?" asked Carter and managed a smile "I gave you a key just so you could come anytime you wanted to Been here long?" he added casually as he steered Adrienne to the most comfortable chair

"Only a quarter of an hour or so" returned the detective. "I've been on an all-night expedition

"Nine o'clock, Monsieur, as always," she replied, "but perhaps Monsieur is not in the mood for [illegible]"

"[illegible] You think that [illegible] has been [illegible] what is [illegible] known as [illegible] at you, Madame Voigne."

"Oh [illegible] Not [illegible] see how wrong [illegible]," returned Carter. "If you will watch carefully, you will see that there is nothing wrong with my appetite, from which fact I am sure that a clever woman like you, Madame Voigne, will deduce that there is no ache in the head and that consequently Monsieur Carter has not been looking too intently on the wine when it is red."

The good landlady's astonishment grew.

"But," she protested, "then there is no sense at all to it! Monsieur's suit must be pressed at once. Regard those thousands of wrinkles!"

"It is a new style that I am launching. It will make me famous undoubtedly. I might even wear my pajamas on the street, then I should get into the newspapers," and Carter regarded her solemnly.

Madame shook her head doubtfully. It was worse than she had thought. Of course all Americans were crazy, that was understood, but this one was turning out to be positively insane! She turned away towards the bedroom.

"Just a moment, Madame. Don't go in there, please," he said. "I have a guest—and I want her to sleep as long as possible."

"Ah!" There was a whole dictionary in the single syllable. The tone of Madame Voigne's voice, the look in Madame Voigne's eyes and the motion of Madame Voigne's hands gave to the simple exclamation all the qualities of one of these "portmanteau" words that Alice's Humpty-Dumpty was so proud of.

"My husband was right," she exclaimed triumphantly. "Monsieur is in love!"

But on second thought she added:

"But still I do not understand why Monsieur prefers the couch. In fact I understand it less than ever."

Carter burst out laughing.

He was quite aware that it was perfectly useless to try and convince his landlady of the simple truth. He did not attempt it.

"At all events we will let the lady sleep, will we not?" he said. "I will ring when she wants breakfast."

Madame Voigne shook her head perplexedly and went back to her own quarters. Carter grinned to think of the piquant subject for interminable discussion that he had provided the good Voignes.

He unhooked the telephone and

The human digestion responds unfavorably to nervousness and strain. It is definitely encouraged by smoking Camels.

Scientific studies show clearly the manner in which Camels aid digestion. Using sensitive apparatus, it is possible to measure accurately the increase in digestive fluids — alkaline digestive fluids — that follows the enjoyment of Camel's costlier tobaccos.

Adventures of Noble Lord Edward Montagu

to "stay put." For four months I tried to sell cars. But I lacked that "snappy line of talk" which my competitors excelled in and which prospective buyers seemed to expect.

I might say a word here about the general financial condition of my family. The Duke of Manchester, my father, has been in the bankruptcy courts and in the newspapers too frequently to make it necessary for me to say that his income is not large. He had married my mother, Helen Zimmerman, daughter of a wealthy American railroad man, and for a time my father enjoyed the luxury of more money than he had before his marriage. But, later on, my mother divorced my father, just about the time I began my wanderings around the United States and Canada. My mother had no legal responsibility, of course, for me or any of the children and I saw little of her and heard very little from her.

At the time of which I am now writing, I was receiving an allowance of $25 a month. The fees at the farm to Lord Rodney for my tuition in farming were paid direct. But when I came to car-selling I did not add much to my $25. After four months I decided to return to the farm for a time, but I had a strong reason for wanting to be in and around Edmonton. The reason was my future wife. Having so far made little progress with my courtship of her, ardent as it was, goodness knows, I decided there was nothing like being on the spot. I moved into Edmonton and the problem of how to augment that $25 a month once more presented itself.

I had driven cars now and then for Mr. Potter, now my father-in-law, and so the idea came to me that I might make a decent bit driving a car for hire. No sooner said than done. And here is one of the very few instances where my title has ever brought me in a cent.

An American "drummer" — commercial traveler — hired me one day at the station and commissioned me to drive him around certain stores and places where he was selling goods. At the end of the day he paid me off and gave me a dollar for a tip.

"I might want you tomorrow again," he said as he went into his hotel. "What's your name, young fellow?" "Montagu," I said.

Next morning I went along to the hotel to see whether the American required me. I found him in the smoke-room. He jumped up excitedly and greeted me: "Say, is this true what a guy was telling me last night about your being a lord? Son of a duke or something?"

I admitted it was true but I added that I hardly saw what that had to do with my coming along to see whether he wanted me to drive him that day.

"Do with it? Say," he cried, "this is the real high spot of my life. When I get back to Detroit and tell the guys there I've been driven around by a duke's son, well—" His face fell as he added, "Nope. They sure just wouldn't believe it. Unless," he brightened up, "you was to give me a note saying you was who you was and then I could show them it. Would you do that if I hire you now?"

I couldn't see any objection. The whole thing was just amusing. And I figured that I wanted that day's hire of my cab badly. So I agreed. I drove him all day. If I had stopped at places to have all the drinks he offered me, it would not have been I who drove him back to the hotel. And at night he gave me my fare. But this time, on top of it, was a twenty-dollar bill.

But taxi driving did not seem to open up prospects of what would enable me to keep a wife. And that was what I was aiming at. Successively I tried selling bonds, driving a car for a political party at election time, working on a newspaper, and learning to become an air pilot. In Canada and the U. S. A., instead of people going to stockbrokers to buy shares, there were regular peddlers of stock going around from door to door just as in England you would sell vacuum cleaners. I had a go at it, with about as much success as I imagine the vacuum cleaner salesmen have. I liked the newspaper job but the editor did not like me, or at any rate my work.

My prospects did not seem very cheerful. But a piece of good news soon reached me which I will explain next Sunday.

put in a call for the Embassy, and begged off for the day. Then he called a steamship line and made a reservation.

Tiptoeing to the door of the bedroom, Carter listened. Satisfied that Adrienne was still asleep, he yawned and stretched his long body once more on the couch. He fell asleep instantly.

When he next awoke it was noon and Mademoiselle de Brisac, dressed as she had been the previous evening, was looking at him amusedly.

"You look funny, my dear—those clothes! Why didn't you get your pajamas?"

He sprang up and kissed her.

"I didn't think about it. Too tired I guess. Did you sleep well, darling?"

"Like the dead. I was very tired!" She nodded.

"How beautiful you are, Adrienne!" he exclaimed. "And a girl who can look as you do—in the morning—is beautiful indeed."

A soft color mounted in her cheeks.

"And a man who can say such things when he has just been awakened is gallant indeed—cheri," she smiled.

He kissed her again and rang for breakfast.

The unheard of promptness with which Madame Voigne responded to the summons argued a curiosity that the last three hours had steadily augmented.

The good woman hovered about them till Carter suggested that the bedroom needed doing. He laughed as she disappeared.

"See what a turmoil you have caused in my staid bachelor diggings," he said to Adrienne.

"I'm glad of it, Armand," returned the girl demurely. "It proves that these—occasions—are quite rare with you!"

He patted her hand.

"I've been considering what to do," he said seriously. "The safest thing for us is to leave Paris till the Club of Nine is forgotten."

She nodded.

"For me—yes! But you—you cannot leave—you have your work."

"I shall resign, Adrienne. We will go to America. Garcion is clever. He is off the track for the moment but when he finds that Alice de Brunel has vanished with no trace, he will begin to wonder. He will put two and two together and make five out of it—and then he will inquire if I really went to Lady Scranton's party."

Carter paused.

"I know my Garcion like a book, cherie. Nothing bothers him more than a loose end. He likes to tie up all the loose ends and make a neat package labeled: "Such and such a case." He is probably wondering already what your name is—and how we happened to arrive here exactly when we did!"

"But, my dear, he could prove nothing against you now that Le Marteau is dead. I cannot be the cause of your giving up your career, Armand," she cried.

"I would give up infinitely more than that for you, Adrienne," he said earnestly. "Now don't argue, my love. There is a liner sailing tomorrow and you and I are going to be on board. The reservations are all made."

Carter lit a cigarette.

"You are going to tell me a story, dearest," he said. "Make yourself comfortable here beside me and then begin at the beginning, go through to the end, and then stop!"

"But how he orders me about!" exclaimed Mademoiselle de Brisac. "One would think that we were married!"

"Oh, no! In America, where we are going, it is the woman who orders her husband about. Besides, you know, we will be married on the boat. The Captain is an old acquaintance of mine."

"How you run on!" she cried. "Have I said I would marry you? In fact, I do not at all recall your asking me."

"No, I never did. Isn't it wonderful, my dear, that we have arrived at such a complete understanding with scarcely a word said? You settled any possible doubt last night, cherie, when you came here without a question, because you trusted me. From that moment I knew what I had only hoped for—that we belonged to each other, Adrienne."

She looked at him a moment in silence. Then, taking his head in her two hands, she leaned over and kissed him on the forehead. And her eyes were brimming with tears.

"I love you, Armand," she whispered.

At length Carter arose and walked to the window. He stared out at the street—seeing nothing. He was very happy. When he turned again, Mademoiselle de Brisac was giving a final pat to her hair. She looked up smiling.

"So you want me to tell you a story, big child?" she asked. "Well, sit here beside me and I will humor you."

"From the very beginning," said Carter as he sat down and took her hand in his.

Using Your Refrigerator for Easy-to-Prepare Holiday Meals

By Mrs. Christine Frederick,

The Distinguished Authority on Household Efficiency.

WITH the glorious Fourth only a few days off—and falling, as it does, on a Saturday—this coming week-end is sure to test the skill and management of any hostess.

It may be scorching hot, or chilly and cloudy, but a hostess must be so psychic that she will have anticipated the right foods, no matter what the temperature.

That is why the automatic refrigerator is first-aid to the anxious hostess. But with a double-checked marketing and shopping list, with menus studied for their flexibility to weather or unexpected recruits for dinner or picnic, the hostess should be able to ease her mind and really join in the day's celebration.

Make out tentative menus first, and the shopping list accordingly, not forgetting ample refreshments of bottled soft drinks, lemons and similar beverage needfuls. Check on all standard supplies, such as sugar, fruit juices, canned goods, tinned fish, crackers, relishes, etc. Lay in a generous supply of all picnic cups, plates, napkins, bags, etc. See that special picnic dishes are cleaned and ready.

Practically any dish, from soup to dessert, may be "made" in the refrigerator. Starting with the popular refreshing chilled bouillon, which is suitable at any Summer meal, this can be made most rapidly by using seasoned tomato juice or tomato cocktail, adding gelatin, then packing into one large or several small molds, or paper cups. A few hours' chilling and one has a delicious bouillon which only requires a slight beating with a fork before serving. Tomato, clam and mushroom seasonings are equally pleasing, and the bouillon can as easily be remade into a hot, tasty soup, should weather necessitate.

Next come the variety of salads, or frozen salad type of recipes, which also may be refrigerator born. In many cases these salads need only to be chilled; they may be packed into a mold, or into individual, large paper cups or cases, or into a fancy tin shape.

If a large number of guests is expected, one may use the regular teacups in which to mold individual gelatin salads with vegetable mixtures—since the smooth surface of the teacup permits very easy removal of the salad to its final plate.

Again, there are recipes for frozen salad mixtures to be handled in the refrigerator trays and left there for from 4 to 6 hours. Such dishes are often made from a melange of fruits chopped and blended with fruit juices, spices, etc., and last combined with folded-in whipped cream. The watermelon recipe accompanying this article is a case in point.

Cream cheese and other types of soft cheese form an important ingredient in all such frozen or chilled salad-desserts. One may create a cheese-cake, or a cheese salad, or a whipped cream cheese salad, lay into the refrigerator tray lined with wax paper, and allow it to remain and freeze for 4 hours. Such a brick is then to be easily sliced, served with lettuce, etc., and preferred additional dressing.

On a very hot day this type of chilled or frozen salad-loaf, with an assortment of sandwiches and berries or melon, is sufficient for even a guest luncheon.

The familiar aspic or meat-jelly dish is a modern improvement over the old-fashioned veal jelly of Dickens' day. Made from a broth and bones of veal, with the addition of spices like bay, whole clove, whole pepper and onions and celery, the carefully-skimmed and strained broth is then poured into a bowl-shaped mold. One night in the refrigerator, and it will emerge as a holiday platter of crystal-clear refreshment of special appeal to all men, especially if accompanied by a mayonnaise toned up with grated horseradish.

There are other aspics and meat jellies also easy to prepare by using meat extracts in cube form, or broth, or the special aspic gelatin now put on the market.

Before passing to other refrigerator suggestions, it may be well to include these notes on making all gelatin dishes:

When molding any gelatin salad, aspic or dessert, see that the mold is first brushed lightly with olive or a neutral salad oil. Then pour in the mixture. When it has set, the gelatin will be easy to unmold because of the slippery quality of the oil.

Molding solid ingredients, such as hard eggs, shrimp, sliced meats, etc., in a clear gelatin is easy if a simple technique is followed: First, have a large outer bowl or shallow pan of cracked ice cubes. Set the real mold on this ice and lay in a thin layer of the clear gelatin. When this has become firm, add the solid pieces which have been previously dipped in liquid gelatin to help them stick.

Do one layer at a time, allow to set, and continue to the top of the mold having the top (bottom when inverted) of clear gelatin so as to stand firm and even on plate or platter.

Avoid too much solid material in the jelly. It is the clear gelatin and its shimmer which is the cooling note of the dish. Too much solid material spoils this effect.

There are, of course, hundreds of refrigerator desserts, and the hostess has only to select her preference. Custards, when chilled, and with cut fruits added, are good desserts because they keep shape so well. But the dessert which surely appeals to the majority of any popular party is ice cream!

And how the refrigerator enables one to prepare ice cream in the new and crankless manner! Two, four or eight refrigerator trays of mixture can be easily frozen with almost no attention, other than once, perhaps, removing tray shortly after it is first placed in the freezing compartment, and then scraping mixture from sides and bottom, smoothing and replacing to the final freezing.

2—Do not try to freeze ice cubes at the same time you are freezing ice cream or such desserts.

3—The lower the temperature as indicated by the control, the more rapid the freezing.

5—The sweeter the mixture the slower the freezing process.

6—To avoid ice crystals, use corn syrup, gelatin, whipped egg whites, cornstarch or a similar stabilizer.

7—Do not whip cream too much before adding to mixtures. It should be beaten only smooth and creamy, and not until it begins to have its fat separate into lumps, or the result will be a lumpy product.

Much else could be said on this all-important topic of how to freeze in the automatic refrigerator, but suffice to remember and follow the above main points.

Cake for the holiday may have its frosting nicely firmed also by placing the cake carefully on a refrigerator rack where it will have plenty of air to set the frosting. Little cup cakes are always good for the picnic basket, and if frosted thickly in white they can have a patriotic touch by using bright red and blue candies and tiny flags on top of each.

To find more food storage space is the real problem when a big week-end and many guests are to be expected. One suggestion is to liberally "bag" a whole lot of foods usually packed or stored in bowls and heavier type refrigerator dishes. Thus, with three or even six or more different batches of vegetables to handle, for the entire week-end, it is a good plan to take each and wash, pick over and put the final pick into a stout brown paper bag.

Spinach, for instance, or asparagus, or squash, etc., may be completely prepared for the cooking style, but packed in paper bags, and thus stuffed into the smallest space on the shelves.

On the floor, under or near the refrigerator, is a cool spot, often cool enough for lemons, melons and potatoes, which do not need to be so chill, merely cool and well ventilated.

Mention has been made in previous articles of the various small and newer types of electric cooking devices and their convenience. Cooking, and likewise keeping chill, many hot weather foods. The ever popular veal or meat loaf, for example, may be cooked in the removable unit or tray of the electric roaster, and, left in that tray, be removed as is to the refrigerator.

If the weather is hot, then the cold loaf will be suitable; but, if the day is chill, or a hot supper more desirable after a swimming party, then the loaf (still in its tray) will go back to the electric roaster to be made piping hot in a few moments.

Many casserole dishes, especially of the hot dog, chili con carne or chicken a la king type, chowders, etc., are grand dishes for the holiday and may be carried in their respective compartments, which are removable from the main unit.

Cook, chill and serve is one way to follow for the picnic; while, if the guests are forced to amuse themselves around the fireplace, the hostess can take the reverse road and heat and serve piping hot.

Tasty Holiday Recipes

JELLIED Tomato Bouillon: Two and a half cups seasoned tomato juice (onion, celery, pinch thyme, etc.), 4 beef extract cubes, 1 tablespoon gelatin, 4 tablespoons cold water, 2 tablespoons minced parsley, 2 tablespoons sherry, green star garnishes cut from green peppers. Soften gelatin in cold water 5 minutes. Have tomato juice well seasoned and heat. Add beef cubes and dissolve, add softened gelatin and dissolve. Add minced parsley and sherry. Pour into one large mold or 4 individual cups and set in refrigerator to harden. May be beaten with fork just before serving. Garnish each cup with pepper star and serve toasted wafers. Serves 4.

Jellied Mushroom Bouillon: One half pound fresh mushrooms, 4 cups water, 2 thin slices mild onion, salt, pepper, 1 tablespoon gelatin, 1 hardboiled egg, 2 tablespoons minced parsley, 2 tablespoons sherry (if desired). Soften gelatin in ¼ cup of the cold water for 5 minutes. Add remaining water to mushrooms which have been twice run through the food chopper (saving all juices), with onion, and simmer 15 minutes or until a rich broth is extracted. There should be 2½ cups of liquid. Add softened gelatin and dissolve. Season with salt, pepper and sherry. Pour into 4 individual cups or molds and set in refrigerator to harden, stirring occasionally. Serve in cups with thin slice of hard egg and minced parsley as garnish. Serves 4.

Picnic Mayonnaise: One and a third cups sweetened condensed milk, ½ cup malt or tarragon vinegar, ½ cup salad or olive oil, 1 whole egg, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons dry mustard, grains cayenne pepper. Place all ingredients in chilled mixing bowl and beat with rotary beater until mixture begins to thicken. Then pack into glass jar and place to chill in refrigerator—which will make it of a thicker consistency. Makes about 2½ cups (may be shaken to right consistency by shaking in tightly capped 1 quart glass jar). This is a basic recipe which may be varied by adding to it grated horseradish, ½ cup whipping cream whipped stiff and folded in just before use, or the added ingredients of any Thousand Island or Russian dressing. Keeps one week in refrigerator.

Frozen Fruit and Cream Cheese Salad: Three-ounce package fresh cream cheese; 3 tablespoons mayonnaise, 1 cup whipping cream whipped stiff, 1 cup chopped ripe canteloupe pulp, 1 cup chopped blue plum pulp, ½ cup strained orange juice, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, ¼ teaspoon cinnamon, ⅛ teaspoon powdered cloves, 1 tablespoon candied ginger minced very fine, salt, toasted shredded almonds. Combine fruit pulps and juices with spices and minced candied ginger and salt and let stand to chill. Mash the cream cheese, add the mayonnaise and blend smooth. Add the chilled and stiffly whipped cream. Fold in the chilled fruit mixture and pack into refrigerator tray lined with waxed paper. Freeze at least 6 hours. Unmold, remove paper, and cut into thick crosswise sections, serving on lettuce and sprinkling over topping of crushed toasted almonds. Serves eight.

Watermelon Sherbet: One and a half cups watermelon water, 1 cup sugar, 1 tablespoon gelatin, 4 tablespoons cold water, ⅛ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon nutmeg or ginger, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 2 cups watermelon pulp, 1 cup whipping cream whipped stiff. Soften gelatin in 4 tablespoons cold water for 5 minutes. Make a syrup of watermelon liquid and 1 cup sugar, and boil 8 minutes. Add softened gelatin and dissolve. Cool. Add lemon juice, spice, and watermelon pulp (shaved very thin). Chill. Whip until it begins to thicken, then fold in the whipped cream and pour into refrigerator tray lined with waxed paper. Freeze at least 6 hours. Serves 8 (either Maraschino juice or a small glass of port wine is an excellent flavor to add to such fruit sherbets).

MILDEW! SCORCH! STAINS! Removed BY MY MAGIC!

DON'T WORRY about mildew... scorch... stains... on white or color-fast cottons and linens. With Clorox on the job they disappear magically. Mildew is a fungus—washing has little effect on it. Clorox goes right to the source of the trouble—its germicidal action destroys the fungus—mildew vanishes. It removes scorch discoloration just as effectively.

Clorox banishes dinginess and ordinary stains from white cottons and linens in the regular laundering process. In a slightly stronger solution Clorox takes out stubborn stains—ink, fruit, flower, grass, beverage, medicine, blood.

Clorox disinfects, deodorizes and removes stains from refrigerators, drainboards, sinks, bathtubs, toilet bowls, tile, linoleum, sickroom utensils, garbage receptacles. Clorox even provides a deodorizing, antiseptic bath for cats and dogs.

Like Clorox itself, the Clorox label is a revelation of safer and easier housekeeping. It also lists many important personal uses. Clorox is concentrated for economy. There is only one Clorox.

SWIFT'S Jewel SHORTENING
Vegetable fat given remarkable new shortening qualities by Swift's Special Blending of it with other bland cooking fats.

FLORA DUTTON of "Miss Dutton's", Providence, Rhode Island. Because her restaurants are famous throughout New England for their delicious food, Miss Dutton was one of several Northern experts whom Swift asked to try Jewel, the Southern Special-Blend Shortening. Without exception, the group reported enthusiastically about Jewel's unusual qualities; they found it has a high smoke point, and creams faster and makes more tender baked foods than the costliest shortenings. Given below is one of Miss Dutton's famous recipes which, like the others she tried, was definitely improved by the use of Jewel.

Southern Barbecue Picnic Recipes

By Mary Lee Swann,

The Well-Known Writer and Lecturer on Cooking.

Georgia Barbecued Lamb.

SCRUB breast or forequarter of lamb with a little soda, rinse well, drop into boiling water and simmer until tender. Then place in a roasting pan, sprinkle with flour and pour the following sauce over and around the meat, and brown evenly. Baste frequently with the sauce. To make sauce: Mix 1 quart well seasoned meat stock with 1 cup mild vinegar, 1 tablespoon prepared mustard, 2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce, ½ lemon rind and juice of ½ lemon, 1 clove garlic, 1 cup minced onion, ½ cup butter, ½ cup tomato or chili sauce and salt and pepper to taste.

Alabama Barbecued Chicken.

CAREFULLY dress chickens weighing about 2 pounds each. Remove breastbones and halve birds. Without salting let stand in ice box overnight. Next day sprinkle with salt. Dip each piece into a barbecue sauce. Place, skin side down, on rack in steam pressure cooker. Bring cooker to 10 pounds pressure and cook 10 minutes. Let pressure and heat recede slowly. This cooks the meat, after which the barbecue is finished by either of two ways: (1) in an oven under heating unit, or (2) over barbecue pit with slow heating. Heating too fast dries and burns the meat. In either case, the chicken is basted frequently with the same sauce into which the raw chicken was dipped. A clean dish mop is used for basting. Serve hot.

Alabama Barbecue Sauce.

HEAT 1 cup apple vinegar, add ¼ pound butter and bring to boiling point. Add 2 twelve-ounce bottles of tomato catsup, 4 or 5 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce, 4 tablespoons salt, juice of 1 onion, juice of 2 lemons, and red and black pepper to taste. This quantity is sufficient for 12 chickens.

South Carolina Barbecued Spareribs of Pork.

HAVE ready 3 pounds pork spareribs or chops. Place half of the meat in a large heavy pot with close fitting cover. Sprinkle meat with a minced onion. Combine ½ cup catsup, ½ tablespoon salt, a few grains pepper, ¼ teaspoon tabasco sauce, ⅛ teaspoon chili powder and 1 cup water. Pour half this mixture over the meat. Put in another layer of the meat and sprinkle with 1 minced onion. Add remaining sauce. Cover closely and bake for 2 hours in a moderate oven.

Barbecued Pork, Chicken or Rabbit.

BROWN 3 or 4 pounds lean pork, chicken or rabbit, add salt to taste and 2 cups water and place in oven to bake. Baste frequently with ½ cup vinegar, 1 teaspoon mustard, 1 tablespoon butter, ½ teaspoon sugar, a few grains black and white pepper and red pepper to taste. Bake slowly until tender and well browned. Serve with the sauce in the pan. Walnut catsup or Worcestershire sauce may be added to vary the flavor.

Mississippi Barbecue Sauce.

MIX 3 pounds melted butter, the juice of 1 dozen lemons, 1 tablespoon catsup, ¼ bottle Worcestershire sauce, 1 teaspoon tabasco sauce, 3 tablespoons salt and 2 cloves of garlic. Discard the garlic after the flavor is absorbed. This quantity is enough for 12 chickens.

Bermuda Onion and Peanut Butter Sandwiches (By Request).

BEAT 1 cup peanut butter until smooth and creamy. Add ¼ cup mayonnaise and spread. Place a thin layer of minced or sliced Bermuda onion on the peanut butter. Press slices together as usual. Serve immediately.

Barbecued Ham.

SCORE a large fresh pork ham with a sharp knife. Mix 1 tablespoon mustard seed, ½ teaspoon celery seed, ½ teaspoon peppercorns, 1 cup sugar, 1 cup vinegar and 2 cups water and let stand 15 minutes. Pour over the ham and let stand overnight, turning it several times. Put ham in dripping pan, fat side down, and cook in covered roasting pan for 4 hours. Strain the vinegar mixture and keep it hot, basting frequently until all is used. Serve hot or cold.

Fried Frogs' Legs. (By request.)

SKIN and wash 6 frogs' legs. Dry well on clean towel. Season with salt, pepper and lemon juice. Beat 1 egg and season it with salt and pepper. Dip the seasoned legs into the egg and roll in fine dry bread crumbs. Plunge them into hot deep fat and fry 2 or 3 minutes. Remove to unglazed paper and drain. Serve immediately, with or without tartar sauce.

Why it Costs you So Much Less to Run
AMERICA'S MOST ECONOMICAL FULL SIZE CAR

Brilliant Engineering Research and Developments have Sensationally Reduced today's car Operating Costs—

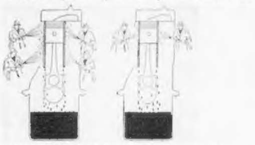
18 to 24 Miles per Gallon of Gasoline Reported by Plymouth Owners...with Oil Consumption and Upkeep the Lowest for any Low-priced Car!

TAKE A BRIEF LITTLE LOOK behind the scenes... see how modern engineering genius has produced the most economical full-size car on America's roads ...and made Plymouth's sensational economy the talk of the country

First of all, the big 1936 Plymouth has a six-cylinder "L-head" engine...the simplest and quietest of modern high-power engines. Important new principles in ignition and cooling give this Plymouth engine the immense power of highest compression ...using ordinary gasoline.

Saves on Oil and Fuel both

Each Plymouth engine cylinder has a full-length water jacket instead of the old-type half-length jacket...plus directional circulation of cool water to every part of the engine. This keeps engine oil cooler by as much as 50 degrees...insures better lubrication...increases operating efficiency...and saves oil.



PLYMOUTH'S full-length water jackets provide twice the cooling of old-type half-length jackets.

"Calibrated ignition" gives utmost power from every drop of gasoline. A four main-bearing crankshaft...four rings for each piston, instead of three ...heat-resisting valve seat inserts...an air-cooled clutch and generator...lightweight aluminum alloy pistons...chain-driven camshaft...full-pressure lubrication...and a score more Plymouth features contribute to better performance and lower costs.

Famed Safety Features Save, Too

Today you'll find that "All Three" low-priced cars are priced about alike. But Plymouth is still the only one with a Safety-Steel Body and double-action Hydraulic Brakes. Modern traffic demands this two-fold protection for your family. Safety-Steel is not only the strongest body construction...it's also the quietest and longest-lasting...doesn't need frequent tightening-up jobs and repairs. And these safest of brakes are self-equalizing...save frequent adjusting.

DIRECTIONAL CIRCULATION keeps each cylinder equally cool . . . illustrated by girls above with individual fans—more comfortable than those below.

"Look at All Three" low-priced cars before you buy. There are more reasons than ever before to follow this good advice. Compare them on economy... safety...comfort...dependability...beauty...and price. Tell your Chrysler, Dodge or De Soto dealer you want to drive this beautiful 1936 Plymouth!

PLYMOUTH DIVISION OF CHRYSLER CORPORATION

TUNE IN ED WYNN, GRAHAM McNAMEE AND ALL-STAR CAST TUESDAY NIGHTS, N.B.C. RED NETWORK

BLOCK RUN TEST...This Plymouth motor will run for hours on its test block in the Plymouth Laboratories. Then it will be "taken down" and every part will be measured to the thousandth part of an inch. From such painstaking research as this have come engineering advances by which "Plymouth is setting the pace!"

PLYMOUTH OWNERS FIND SENSATIONAL ECONOMY... from all over the country, where varying types of conditions prevail. Plymouth owners report 18 to 24 miles per gallon of gasoline...little or no oil added between changes...and the lowest upkeep expense you ever heard of for low-priced cars.

That is why you hear people saying everywhere you go today, "Plymouth is America's most economical full-size car!"

DOUBLE-ACTION HYDRAULIC BRAKES

SAFETY-STEEL BODY

(Left) WHAT'S FLOATING POWER? The Plymouth engine is suspended in balance by Floating Power engine mountings...so that it dissipates its own vibration... which otherwise shortens life of engine and car and is so unpleasant for driver and passengers.

EASY TO BUY—The big 1936 Plymouth is priced with the lowest...terms as low as the lowest! You can buy a new Plymouth for $25 a month. The Commercial Credit Company has made available to all Chrysler, Dodge and De Soto dealers low finance terms that make Plymouth easy to buy.
